A POLITICAL STORY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY "DOBBS."

Radicals and democrats, please give attention,
I have a story that I'd like to tell:
'Twas fifty years ago, the fact I mention,
And 'tis a fact, of that I know full well.
At the time I speak of, politics ran high—
Both democrats and whigs were working hard;
Each party rallied aloud their battle cry,
Each lied about the other without regard.

In a certain town, not a thousand miles from here,
They had a regular old times election,
Two citizens trying to read their title clear,
Two candidates from which to make selection.
One was a lawyer, young, and full of life,
In speaking to the point he knew each evolution;
The other one was old, a man of strife,
His party said "he'd fit in the Revolution."

They were both engaged to speak on one occasion,
While the sovereign people 'round the rostrum stood;
And below the speaker's elevated station
They waited for their intellectual food.
The young man soon led off, and quickly gave
The cause of a nation's moral destitution,
And how, in his opinion, we might save
Our noble country and her constitution.

Then up the old man 'rose and loudly told
What for our glorious country he had done:
He'd stood for months the winter's bitter cold,
And marched beneath the sweltering mid-day sun;
He'd left his tracks in blood upon the field,
He'd suffered both from hunger and from thirst;
To foe in battle he never yet did yield;
The last to leave, to fight the very first.

Then says a voter to the warrior old,
"Is everything you've said to-night quite true?
Can that be so what you have just now told?
Have marched through heat and cold—been hungry, too?"
"'Tis true, my friend, I spoke no idle stuff,
For I have often led the army's van."
"Then," says the voter, "I guess you've done enough—
I think that I'll vote for the other man."

HIGH AND LOW;

OR,

THE FORTUNE HUNTER FOILED.

It was a clear, crisp night in October. In the neat farm-house Alice had lived all her life, and now, as she stood in the parlor, she felt a sadness that could not be wholly stifled by her dreams of ambition, her strong longings for some great, some active life.

There was a bright wood fire on the hearth, but she had thrown up a window and stood by it, looking on to the low piazza, whose vines were faded by the early frosts. There was no moon; the clear, star sheen came in at the window and was lost in the glare of the fire. The girl was not alone.

Leaning against the window, his eyes looking absently out into the old fashioned flower garden, stood the friend and companion of her childhood and later days. She was not thinking of him then, or if she was her thoughts were so mingled with her reminiscences of past years that she could not separate the two. Indeed, he was mixed up with all her days, whether happy or sorrowful.

But he was thinking most decidedly and intently of her, though he was not looking at her. It seemed to him that the parting to-morrow would be like the wrenching asunder of soul and body—that without her he should have only the dead flesh to carry about, with no object, no hope. If she would only promise him that she would think of him; that she would one day allow him to claim her hand and heart! He was suffused with a sudden tremulous heat as he thought of such a possibility.

"After all, Alice, are you sorry to go?" he asked, delaying the utterance of what he must say before he left her.

She turned her dark eyes to his face and smiled somewhat sadly as she said:—

"Oh, yes, unspeakably sorry! It seems almost as though I were cutting myself loose from a safe, quiet life, and might be tossed among tempests before I got back to harbor again. I feel as if I were leaving this life for ever."

Her companion's face flushed with fear and eagerness as he said, quickly:—

"Don't go then, Alice. Stay with us. Is not this life good enough, after all?"

"I can't stay," she replied, shaking her head decidedly. "With my aunt I shall have opportunities for culture which I can never have here. I shall only half know life. I want to do something—to be something!"

The bright glow came to her cheeks, the brilliancy to her eyes. She did not know what misery her friend was experiencing yet endeavoring to conceal from her.

"In the meantime," he said, with grave sorrow, "I shall be just where you leave me; I shall have no chance for the cultivated polish you will acquire. What shall you think of me when you return, if you ever do come back? What shall you think of me?"

He had suddenly taken both her hands and was looking with a trembling, fierce earnestness at her.

"Think of you?" she repeated, a blush, in spite of herself, overspreading her face, for he had never looked at her in that way before. "I shall think of you as one of my dearest friends—as one to be trusted and believed in always."

"In no other way, Alice? I shall remember you as one whom I love with all my life. Heart and soul are yours. I shall love you always!"

The words were uttered with a tone utterly different from any he had used before, with an impetuous earnestness that startled her. Her head drooped, her lips quivered and tears filled her eyes.

"Oh, John," she said, under her breath, "I am sorry you have spoken like this!"

"Then you are sorry I feel like this?" he asked, growing paler as he spoke.

Her face told him before her lips said "Yes."

"Did you think I could see you almost every day since we were children, share all your griefs and pleasures, dream of you as I have done since childhood, and not love you? During all my life every hope and aspiration has centered in you, Alice, is it true that you do not love me at all? Not enough even to give me any hope for the future?"

There was a pleading pathos in his tone that penetrated to her heart.

"It cannot be my fault, John," she said. "I did not know you felt thus. I have never thought of such a thing. Oh, my friend," she continued, with a sudden tender tone, "forget all this; be my friend, as of old!"

She suddenly extended her hand to him with a gesture of entreaty. He held it fast, while he said, gravely:—

"I cannot forget. I must love you; but believe me I will neither trouble nor importune you. I should not care for a love for which I was obliged to entreat. I will be to you always a sincere friend. Never hesitate in asking a favor of me. You know I would never take advantage."

As the girl listened to the deep, sincere tones, she felt a sudden and sure rest, as if a foundation of truth was offered for her support. But this was not the love she had dreamed of—indeed her ideas were too vague to be put into words—but in the future to which she was going she expected to find some hero who would stir all the romance of her nature.

She thoroughly liked John Winship, and after the manner in which he had just spoken to her she felt a strange and unwonted tenderness towards him; but she told herself it was only the natural result of a last night at home, of remembrances of his goodness in the past. It was easy to think that, after all, it was a mere fancy of his that he loved her. He would soon forget her. Yet that thought brought an unacknowledged pain.

"You will, at least, write to me?" he said, as at last he took his hat to go.

"I shall be glad to write to you and to hear from you," she said. "I shall be lonely at first. There will be nobody that will care for me."

Alice's voice faltered a little.

"There will soon be people enough who will care for Mrs. Granger's ward," said John, bitterly. "Shall you know the gold from the dross?"

"They will not harm me," was the confident answer of the girl of nineteen.

"Say a kindly good bye to me," he said, dreading to go, yet feeling that he must. "Give me something to remember through all the long, weary days to come. Heaven knows how I shall endure them!"

She put her hand in his, trying hard to keep the tears from her eyes.

"You will let me—this time?" he murmured, drawing her to him, and pressing his lips to hers in a way that made her cheeks burn as she thought of it in her chamber a moment after.

Clarence had been rare between them; he had not touched her lips before since they had been little children. He did not come to see her next morning before she left the farm-house. She had half hoped he would and hurriedly dressed even earlier than was necessary.

Arrived at the little railway station she looked for him, holding, with trembling hand, by the arm of her stepmother. But the train thundered along, and in a moment after she was whirled away without seeing him again. Then her thoughts gradually left the country village and flew onward to the great city, towards which she was speeding. She felt a sad feeling, mingled with something of triumph, that this girl who journeyed away would never come back again—never in the old spirit with the old heart.

* * * * *

Slowly the crowd poured from the cathedral—the dark-faced, deep-eyed crowd that indicated it was beneath an Italian sun that this high holiday was celebrated. With the mass of people, swayed with them, curiously observing them, and between whiles looking round for her party, from whom she had become separated, was a richly clad girl, whose proud, intelligent face was very different from most of the countenances about her.

At first she had tried to get away from the crowd, but she was drawn in irresistibly, and finally desisted from her efforts and yielded to the force that bore her on, thinking that, once in the street, she could free herself and find her company. But, before half the people were out, from some quarter of the vast cathedral rose the alarm of "Fire!"

Alice Granger's heart seemed for a moment to cease beating, for that cry infused the spirit of wild animals into the gay concourse. In that first moment of horror Alice felt that fire itself would be kinder than these terrible beings. It was in vain that she struggled to get back—for she preferred staying in the building. The fiends themselves would have been no more thoughtless and pitiless. They rushed on, trampling upon the helpless ones, crushing, shouting and praying.

Death seemed near to the girl. She closed her eyes to avoid seeing the distorted faces about her. Her clothes were already tattered, her limbs half paralyzed; she could not make a single movement. It was then that an arm of iron grasped her, a swift hand dealt a few furious blows about her, and in some miraculous way the crowd immediately about her was made to part a little, and she was drawn backward until at last she and her unknown friend stood in a solitary place in the church.

After one or two long breaths that restored strength to her frame, she withdrew from the arm that supported her and looked up at her companion. It was a dark, handsome face that she saw; it was a figure of careless elegance. Her rescuer might have been thirty-five, and if there were marks of dissipation, if there could be unpleasant lines in that face, Alice did not see them. She only knew that he was looking at her with solicitous admiration; that he said, in a deep, melodious voice:—

"I hope you are not hurt?"

"No, thanks to you. Save a general sense of confusion, I have not been harmed." Then, with a sudden look around her, she added, "But is not the church, then, on fire?"

"Not visibly so, as you perceive. I think it was a false alarm. Will you permit me to take you to your friends?"

"I shall be very grateful if you will do so," she replied, feeling strongly the apparently restrained interest and admiration in the stranger's looks and tones."

Edward Randall did not neglect to improve his time in the ten minutes' ride from the cathedral to the hotel occupied by Alice's party. Indeed, it was very rare for him to waste an opportunity when with ladies, and at the door of the hotel he bowed to Alice, having permission to call and see her, and leaving a deeper impression on her fancy than any man had done since she had been the courted protege of her aunt.

Sauntering down the street, he met a couple of his acquaintances who, apparently, had been watching for him. Less polite, possessing less of the actor's talent, they were very evidently of that class called "fast," with no redeeming trait in their appearance.

"We've been lying in wait for you, Randall," said one of them, "for we are nearly dying with curiosity. Who the deuce was that girl? I've seen her twice within the last week. I shouldn't mind having a smile from her myself."

"You!" said Randall, with ill-concealed contempt.

"I don't mind telling you, however, of the success of a little plot of mine."

He slowly lit his cigar, a smile of exultation gleaming in his eyes.

"I've noticed that girl lately," he went on, "and I confess I've been rather taken with her. There's some tangible inducement to win her. I inquired on the sly, and found she's Alice Granger, and heiress to a hundred thousand from her aunt. That settled the question, of course. The next feeling was to become acquainted with her. I thought I'd make a bold stroke, so as to be on an intimate footing directly on account of a spice of gratitude. I followed her to church to-day, and, after the services, I raised a cry of 'Fire!' The pack of idiots made a stampede; I kept near Miss Granger, and at the right moment I rescued her from the crowd. It was rather tough work, and spoiled my hat and coat, as you see; but I mean she shall pay for them."

The three had sat down beneath a tree, and Randall took his cigar from his lips, watching intently the long spiral column of smoke as it rose in the air. Seeing him then, no one would have thought his face handsome.

"By George!" cried one of them, "I don't envy the Granger when she becomes Mrs. Randall!"

"Don't be profane," remarked Randall, quietly. "I shall make her a good husband—a model, in fact. I like her; she's about the kind. Meanwhile I invite you to a tip-top supper at our mansion one year from to-day."

"We'll be there," was the response. "But supposing the affair fails?"

"Impossible. Then I'll give you a spread anywhere you say at the time."

"Then it's settled," said the two, with a half-incredulous laugh, noting the engagement down in their pocket books.

Alone in her room at the hotel, Alice was thinking, with a somewhat heightened color in her cheeks, of a pair of eyes that had looked at her with evident admiration, of a musical voice that had addressed her with such winning respect. But Alice was not weaker than many another woman who had listened to that same voice. For the first time since early girlhood had she seen one whose manner and look seemed the reality of her dreams —who was the hero of her idle imaginings. And the manner of his introduction lent a charm of romance to him.

It was with some concern that Randall heard, the next day, that the party in which traveled Mr. and Mrs. Granger were to leave in a day or two, to journey straight to Scotland, and thence back to London. But in the next thought he had decided to go with them, and adroitly mentioned his intended journey when he called, before they had told him of their own intentions.

He succeeded, as he always had done, only he had never yet reached the acme of his desires—marrying a fortune. By the time the Grangers arrived in London from their tour, Randall was their intimate friend, and so conspicuously devoted to Alice that Mrs. Granger began to think about his position, and what fortune he might be possessed of. He talked modestly and vaguely of his income, but more definitely and proudly of his family; and Mrs. Granger, greatly as she prided herself upon her perception, was deceived by him. Was he not delicately attentive to herself?

"There is an old friend in the-parlor waiting for you," said Mrs. Granger, one morning, a month after their return. "Go down just as you are, without guessing who it is."

Alice slowly descended the stairs, thinking of Randall, and knowing it was much earlier than he ever made his appearance. She stood for a moment in the open doorway before he saw her. She saw his profile—noble, manly, handsomer than she had remembered him. Then she stepped forward, and he rose to meet her.

Once more she laid her hand in that of John Winship's, and looked into his clear, truthful eyes. She was conscious of some change in him. He was elegantly, but not finically dressed; his bearing had an ease and assurance in it which the country boy of twenty-one had not known. His face flushed, a splendor came to his eyes as he touched her hand timidly.

They were both thinking how the other had changed, improved. Then, after the first few moments of constraint, they fell naturally into the easy and intimate way of old friends. A quiet, sweet warmth diffused itself through Alice's heart as she found herself once more in his presence. It was a feeling so utterly different from the fevered, inflaming, fitful, fancy-created pleasure she experienced when with Randall, that it almost startled and alarmed her.

Winship had risen to go, and was standing by her, his very presence seeming to enfold and shield her, while his deep, irresistibly tender glance was bent upon her, when Randall sauntered in, unannounced; as if he were at home. He was very visibly surprised at seeing the gentleman there; he halted for an instant, then advanced with outstretched hand, saying:—

"It's really you, isn't it, Winship? You surprised me almost out of my power to recognize you."

Winship took the proffered hand, uttering a polite, but not cordial greeting. Then he turned to Alice, with some indescribable cloud on his face, and made his adieu. He walked down the street with a more rebellious, unhappy feeling than he had ever experienced. His love had noted with suspicion the manner of Randall as he had bent over Alice's hand—the tender ownership of his demeanor towards her.

"It is misery, it is death itself, for her to marry him!" he exclaimed to himself as he walked up and down the room appropriated to him at his sister's house. "The fellow has fascinated her. He wants her money, and she will be his victim. It must not, it cannot be!"

All the repressed love of his life surged up in irresistible waves of feeling. He knew this man, and thinking of him in association with Alice made him shudder. For a long while he tried in vain to think of some means by which Alice could be made to realize the character of her lover, and that it was not herself whom he courted.

At last, with a sort of despairing hope, he told his sister, who entered with earnestness into his feelings, and with feminine ingenuity suggested a plan so simple, that Winship anticipated an entire undeceiving in consequence. A week later Winship called upon Randall on some pretext or other, and half an hour afterwards the two were sauntering down the street together, Winship, with a mighty effort, being suave and cordial. They approached his sister's house, and Winship said, carelessly:

"My brother-in-law bought a lot of champagne last night, which he prides himself immensely upon. Come in, and tell me what you think about it."

Randall did not object, but he said as he mounted the steps:—

"It seems to me, Winship, you are not quite so formal as I fancied you were when I first saw you. Has town life converted you—eh?"

"Perhaps you misunderstood me," was the reply, as the two sat down in the parlor, and Winship rang and ordered the wine.

He absently touched his lips to the glass, while Randall drank his with an air of a connoisseur.

"That's good," he said. "By-and-bye I shall have the right kind in my cellars, I'll wager."

He poured out another glass. Though not in the least intoxicated, he had evidently been already exhilarated by drink that morning.

"Your cellars are rather mythical, I imagine," said Winship, his listening ear detecting the faint rustle of draperies in the parlor beyond, whose doors were half open.

"They won't be so for long," was the response. "I shall have them well stocked before next winter's out."

Winship looked up inquiringly.

"Oh, I shall marry a fortune, and a pretty girl into the bargain. I've spoken for the Granger niece."

The speaker did not see the pallid hue that overspread his listener's face—he did not know how near he was to being kicked out of the house; but Winship controlled himself, and asked quietly:—

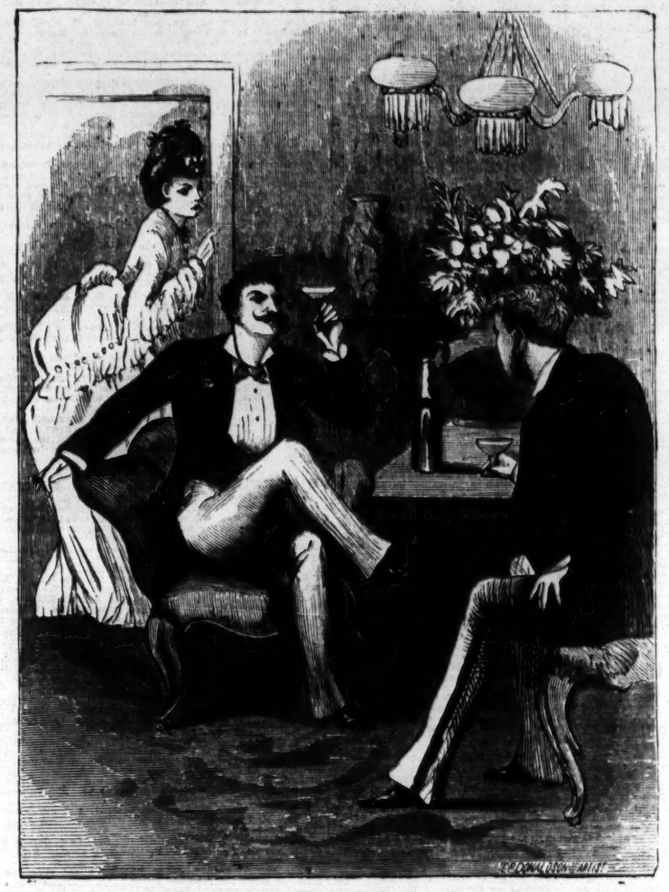
"Has she accepted you?"

"Yes, but she hangs off about the marriage, which I wish to be directly. She says she hardly knows me yet—which is exactly what I mean she shall not do. To tell you the truth, Winship, I like the girl. She'll be no encumbrance at all."

He talked on, in the way some men who have been taking wine will talk to other men; then he left, and Winship went up to his own room. In half an hour Alice Granger, who had been out with Winship's sister, and had accompanied her home, left the house and walked rapidly home, with paler face and a steel-like sparkle in her eyes.

When Randall called again he received a few cold, decisive words from a girl who seemed barely to tolerate his presence. Those words precluded the possibility of his ever calling again.

The dream of fascination was broken by the lips that had woven it. Alice's nature rebounded into the healthy channel natural to it. Her beautiful and pure love came to her life, and at last she knew that in truth she had never given her heart to any one save the faithful lover of her childhood.



"HIGH AND LOW." "Oh, I shall marry a fortune."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

As I walk'd in a garden one evening in June
I espied a fair maid, who, complaining
Of the dull cares of life and her sorrowful lot,
Insisted upon my remaining.
So we sat down and talk'd of the silv'ry moon,
She seemed in a mood melancholy,
I tried to console her and told her that not
To give way to such nonsense and folly;
The tint of the red rose had fled her fair face,
And indeed she looked much indispos-ed,
But closer she drew to my side as she spoke,
And heaved a heart rise than disclos-ed.
She said, "Oh, please tell me where in this wide world
(Her voice seemed to me almost frigid)
Can I find affection and sympaathy, sir?"
"In Webster"—I said—"unabridg-ed."

A ROMANCE OF THE SIERRAS.

Peruvian Bar reposed on the banks of a gently flowing stream, not wide or deep enough to be designated a river, and consequently called a creek. It was a flourishing mining camp, having the reputation of being the "Roughest Bar in the Southern mines," and the abode of the worst characters in that section of the country. A place where a man for breakfast" was no uncommon occurrence, and where the "sweet note of the pistol" often resounded. Under these circumstances, the expression, "Peruvian Bar reposed," may appear an anomaly, but it must be understood that the time was early dawn, and that the "roughs" had not yet recovered from the effects of the previous night's debauch. The portion of the camp, which are the general business, including gambling, restaurants, saloons and places of business in towns of this description, were not yet open, and the milkman, with his clanging cans, was only just driving back to his ranch on the arroyo. It was the morning of the "glorious Fourth," however, and the wild inhabitants of Peruvian Bar cut their slumbers short. The warm rays of the morning sun were only beginning to shoot across Table Mountain when the bustle and excitement in which the camp lay, when the main street began to show signs of life. The doors of cabins on the hillside opened, and tall, able-bodied specimens of humanity, wearing red shirts, tramped through the dew along the narrow path to some "Magnolia" or "Long Tom" in the town, which had now opened for the reception of all who might apply for the invigorating beverages dispensed in such places by the gentlemanly bar-keeper, who appeared in a "bran new" white linen coat, cool and refreshing to those who possessed the "wherewith," whether coin or credit, with which to purchase the beverages aforesaid, and decidedly cold to the very few who were known as chronic "bummers" and "old beats," in Peruvian Bar parlance. The residents of this model camp, turned out from cabin, hovel and hotel—miners, gamblers, desperadoes and horse thieves (the latter decidedly sub rosa, for it was a greater crime to steal a horse in Peruvian Bar than to kill a man), all proceeding in one direction and for one object—their matutinal drink.

"Give us a cocktail, Ned; and don't forget the lightning; three fingers—no more, no less—do you mind?" was the greeting which a slight and rather good-looking young man addressed to the bar-tender of the "Rifle" saloon as he entered the place on the morning in question.

"All right, Jack; three fingers, eh?" returned Ned, and he busied himself with the mixture.

"Goin' to the races to-day, Ned?" asked the young man.

"Can't say, Jack; it all depends on the old man, you know," replied the bar-keeper.

"Oh! he'll let you off; I tell you what, Ned, it's goin' to be the wickedest run Peruvian Bar ever saw, you can bet your life on that," explained Jack.

"Are you going to ride?" asked Ned.

"Should say I was, slightly; and I'll kill old Martel's hoss or win the race, betwixt you and me and you, Ned, I've got 'big money' bet on 'Fan' and I can't afford to throw off, you know; so if you want to bet on a sure thing, just pungle up on a pool in the 'Fan' claim."

"Oh, there's no doubt of your winning the race, provided that mare from Peterson's don't bother you," answered Ned.

"Never you mind that mare from Peterson's, and don't forget a drop with an air of a connoisseur.

"That's good," he said. "By-and-bye I shall have the right kind in my cellars, I'll wager."

The speaker did not see the pallid hue that overspread his listener's face—he did not know how near he was to being kicked out of the house; but Winship controlled himself, and asked quietly:—

"Has she accepted you?"

"Yes, but she hangs off about the marriage, which I wish to be directly. She says she hardly knows me yet—which is exactly what I mean she shall not do. To tell you the truth, Winship, I like the girl. She'll be no encumbrance at all."

He talked on, in the way some men who have been taking wine will talk to other men; then he left, and Winship went up to his own room. In half an hour Alice Granger, who had been out with Winship's sister, and had accompanied her home, left the house and walked rapidly home, with paler face and a steel-like sparkle in her eyes.

When Randall called again he received a few cold, decisive words from a girl who seemed barely to tolerate his presence. Those words precluded the possibility of his ever calling again.

The dream of fascination was broken by the lips that had woven it. Alice's nature rebounded into the healthy channel natural to it. Her beautiful and pure love came to her life, and at last she knew that in truth she had never given her heart to any one save the faithful lover of her childhood.

"Clear the track, gents; it is two mile and repeat, and the best horse wins. Ready!"

The horses were under the line. Jack steadied himself as he shouted his familiar cry.

"Watch the mare, boys; she jumps like a rabbit and runs like a deer."

"Go!" came from the judges' stand and the animals sprang away.

The horse upon which Jack was mounted obeyed the touch of his spur and literally leaped from the stand. Three quick, long jumps, carried the mare a full length in front of the Flyer, and then like a streak she tore down the track. But the Flyer was "no sardine," as a miner expressed it, and hung like a leech upon that length, keeping the distance as they passed the stand the first time around, and gradually closing the gap on the last half mile, and almost lapping Fan's girth on the home-stretch.

The second start was even better than the first, and, as the horses tore around the track, throwing the dust right and left, the excited and almost crazed crowd outside the fence saw that Martel's mare would win, and she did, coming in three lengths ahead of the Flyer, who almost sank to the ground under her heavy exertions. Wild and fierce were the plaudits that greeted the close of the race, and wilder still the yells that went up from that crowd of rough miners and desperadoes as Fanny Darling sprang from her exhausted steed and bowed low and graceful to Jack the "Marquis," at the same time saying:—

"Marquis Jack, you've beat me, but I ran you hard."

And Jack, bowing in return, replied:—

"Darling Fanny, you ran me hard, but your namesake can't be beat, for she jumps like a rabbit and runs like a deer."

"You're a liar! She could have been beat!" and Martel burst through the crowd and stood scowling at Jack the Marquis.

Quick as thought, Jack sprang upon the Frenchman, and, closing his fingers tight around his throat, hurled him to the ground. A pistol shot rang out sharp and deadly on the air, and the Kentuckian who had acted as one of the judges fell to the earth writhing in his death agony. The next moment Jack the Marquis stood erect, with a long bowie-knife dripping with blood in his right hand, while Martel lay dying upon the bloody track—three gaping wounds in his breast indicating the cause of his horrible convulsions and strugglings. The crowd, hardened as they were to such sights, stood aghast at the double murder that had been enacted so rapidly before them, and hesitated to act.

Fan was the first to arouse, and starting forward, picked up the pistol lying beside Martel, and, looking around upon the crowd, shouted in thrilling accents, "This man, Martel, killed Kentuck, and has jumped the game himself. It's the law of the border, an' no one's to blame."

All were not of Fanny's opinion, however, and Jack the Marquis was already in the hands of the law. "Constable Bob," as he was called, had laid his hand upon the murderer's shoulder before Fanny had concluded her lawless speech.

As Jack the Marquis was conducted back to Peruvian Bar, whisperings and ominous glances were exchanged among the more respectable portion of the spectators, and when the crowd once more stood before the counters of the "Magnolia" or "Long Tom," excited discussions in regard to the murders were indulged in, both for and against the only living participant, who was at that moment secure in a cell of the rude jail that the county boasted. For some time past a better class of men had been gathering in and around Peruvian Bar, who discountenanced the lawless and bloody scenes that were being enacted daily in the county, and for weeks past rumors of a vigilance committee had been floating about. This last series of affrays capped the climax, and the resolution to organise the Vigilance Committee was fully determined upon.

Night closed upon the scene of this Fourth of July in Peruvian Bar with the excitement unabated. Crowds of men gathered upon the corners and in the street, and it was soon whispered about that a body of men were in session at the court house. It was ostensible purpose of prosecuting crime at the Bar, and making a few examples of those who had been ruling with a high and lawless hand. The rumors were confirmed when Nick Dangerfield, the owner of the best paying claim on the Bar, read an order from the court house veranda, commanding, in the name of the Vigilance Committee of Peruvian Bar, all such characters as "Squatty Dick," "Ace Scotty," "Mourning Pete," and a host of others of like characters, all dangerous men in the community, to leave before daybreak, on penalty of being summarily dealt with by the aforesaid Vigilance Committee, giving as a reason for the action which they had taken, "that crime was rampant, and that blood flowed like water, necessitating these prompt and summary measures. The order stood upon the veranda, and the white light of the moon, just lifting itself above the square ridge of Table Mountain, shone down upon his powerful frame. A silent and attentive crowd stood in the space between the veranda and the fence that enclosed the court house, listening almost breathlessly to the irresistible commands of the People's Court.

"Jack" of Yack the Marquis,' 'Shorty Wagner,' and 'Fandango Frank,' they have this day split the blood of their fellow man, and must die before the sun comes over Table Mountain." As the words rang clear, yet solemn on the midnight air from the lips of a man who all knew would never flinch in what he considered duty, the crowd seemed to shrink imperceptibly away from its vicinity, leaving a few of their number, law-abiding citizens, who wished to join the committee in the work of suppressing the bloody outrages that had gained for Peruvian Bar the unenviable reputation of being "the roughest camp in the Southern Mines."

Swiftly, yet silently, a great throng of determined men threaded their way through the streets and alleys of Peruvian Bar, from the court house out upon the dusty road to the jail. "Hand over your keys, Bob," was Nick Dangerfield's greeting, as the crowd halted in front of the sombre structure.

The command was obeyed, and eight men entered the jail, soon after appearing with three struggling human being in their midst. They were bound hand and foot and carried across the creek to a narrow plateau, upon which, isolated, stood a towering pine, clear of its branches and foliage for thirty feet from its base. The prisoners, knowing that there was no escape from their fate, uttered not a single word, and suffered the ropes to be placed about their necks without a groan. "Shorty Wagner" was the first to swing out from the shadow into the soft light of the midnight moon, writhing and struggling in the dangling form with which the rope passed. The next name that fell from the lips of Nick Dangerfield was "Jack, the Marquis," and a moment after another form cast its horrible shadow upon the upturned faces of those who held the rope. As "Fandango Frank" was being drawn toward the others, a husky, choking murmur escaped him, and the rope broke. Quick as a flash the crowd was upon him, another rope passed over the limb, and the desperado's earthly career of vice and crime was ended. At this moment a cry of horror, awful in its tone and terrible in its import, burst upon the still night, uttered by a man who, with face pale as the dead, stood pointing at the swaying form of "Jack, the Marquis." Every eye was turned in the direction in which the man was pointing, and the cry was repeated in a wild for embiage, for there, in the pale, ghastly light of the moon, the face distorted with supreme agony, hung Fannie Darling, "The Pride of the Bar," gazing with that horrible, inexpressible expression down upon her awe-stricken murderers. The cord was cut, but the attempt at resuscitation came too late, for the soul of the misguided girl had taken flight. She had died in her devotion to a worthless lover, who forgot the woman who had saved him from a terrible fate. They gave her a rude, border burial, and she sleeps beneath the shadow of Table Mountain. The head board which once marked the spot has long since disappeared, but the lonely wayfarer across the sierras could once decipher upon the rude cross above the little mound the one word, "Fan." Peruvian Bar exists no longer, and those who once made the gorges and arroyas ring with the music of the pick and cradle are scattered far and wide, but never will they forget the night that ended the life of Fannie Darling.—San Francisco Morning Call.

BASE BALL, Baltimore.—"1. There is a man on the first base, the striker hits a good ball, which is stopped by the second baseman, who (without waiting for the man at first to arrive at second) fields the ball to first, in order to make a double play, but he throws wildly, and the striker makes his first, thus frustrating the attempt at a double play. Now, is the man running to second to be considered out, although he was not touched by the ball? 2. A ball is struck which goes right for the short stop, who is awaiting it, but right in front of him it strikes a stone or an uneven portion of the ground and bounds far above his head, beyond his reach. Is this to be considered an error for the fielder, and is a base hit to be counted for the striker? 3. No errors have yet been made by the field. The striker knocks up an easy fly, which is muffed. This being the first error for the field. He gets home on good hits by his successors at the bat, and before any more errors are made by the field. Is his run earned? 4. A man is at the bat who has made two strikes. A man on first is then put out while trying to steal to second, making the third hand out. Does the man who is at the bat go first to the bat the next innings, or the next batter after him? 5. No errors have as yet been made by the field. The striker makes a good base hit and reaches second base. He attempts to make third, and does so only through a bad muff of the third baseman. He gets home before any other errors are made beside this one. Is his run earned, although he has had a life given him? 6. Can only those runs be considered earned which are made by men who have made base hits? (Of course, I mean if the runs are scored before three errors have been made)." ——1. Yes, he was forced off. 2. It is not an error, nor can it rightly be given as a base hit. 3. His run is not earned, because, but for an error, he would have been out. 4. The man who follows the last man put out goes to the bat. 5. No, as he made one of the bases by an error. 6. Only by players who have made base hits.

L. STOCKMAN.—The match you refer to was reported by our regular Philadelphia correspondent whom we have hitherto found reliable. In his declining that the ball caught by George Wright was a catch, however, he was in error. The point of play arranged by Harry Wright to be tried on the Athletics in this game was based on an erroneous interpretation of the rules, inasmuch as in base ball, as in cricket, a ball caught by a player with his hat or cap is dead for putting the striker out. In the case in point the striker was not only put out, but he had to strike over again. This rule needs amending so far as to make the catching a ball by the cap a dead ball in every respect, as it has hitherto been considered. Had we been umpire in the game we should have decided the striker out, the ball dead to the extent of forcing the striker to run first base, and consequently dead as to forcing the other men off the bases. If this cap catching were allowed there would be endless disputes on points of play difficult to judge which would result from it.

ALPHA.—R beta that Governor Hoffman has not the same power to enforce the New York eight hour law in this state that President Grant has to enforce the congressional law in the United States. Is R right?"——Gov. Hoffman can only enforce the eight hour law in this state in works directly under the authority and pay of the state. President Grant's power extends to persons working for the government of the United States, and he also claims the power to direct payment to all government employees who have worked ten hours a day since the passage of the congressional eight hour bill, for extra pay for the additional two hours a day, although this is in opposition to the opinion of the attorney general.

VIENA TROPE.—1. At chess, a player may call for as many moves as he chooses against his opponent's "royal rook" or "king row," as you term it. 2. When, at billiards, a player's ball is in hand, the reds are in the string, and his opponent's is off the table, said player must play outside of the string, or he scores no count. 3. Base ball rules do not call for a game to consist of the string and return. 4. At poker, a straight flush, when played, which should be agreed on before commencing, beats four of a kind. 5. We have no agreement that has previously been made to that effect, a player cannot call for his partner's best card and play it alone, at euchre.

C. W. H.—"A bets $100 each on New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, they severally carried by Horace Greeley. C claims that if either of the above states goes for Grant, A loses $300. A claims that it is $400 on each state, and that if one goes for Grant, he wins on the other two, provided they go for Greeley. C bets in sight, A or C to decide as the bet was $400 on each state, if one of them goes for Greeley and the other two for Grant, C will win from A. If vice versa, then A will win $100 of C. It is not a triple event bet, as stated above.

CADONY.—1. Our decision is based on justice to all parties. Each player, in turn, has a right to pass upon the question of the trump until it is settled. If No. 1, left of dealer, passes, No. 2 has the next say, and so on, around to the dealer, but after No. 3 refers to assist the dealer, his partner, and the latter, upon that either goes alone, it deprives No. 3 of his right, in regular order, to pass upon the trump, which the dealer cannot legally do. 2. The book is not within our answer.

DA COSTA.—"A man is on each of the 1st, 2d and 3d bases, when a grounder is knocked between short stop and second base, which the former fields to the latter, who runs for the 2d base and put the man out running from 1st to 2d; but before getting it there the batter has made his 1st, and the man on 3d has crossed the home plate. Does the run score?"——Yes.

CONSTANT READER.—1. The owner of the dead ox has that privilege, but the latter cannot go alone. 2. In all fours, where each have scored five, the party making low, Jack, go out before those making high game. 3. Jack cards every game, and turns up, except in a misdeal. 4. Where no trumps are out, there can be no high nor low.

TYRO, Albany, N. Y.—It is customary in writing of the joint authors or possessors of anything to possessive case, to use only one apostrophe. We are of opinion that only one apostrophe should be used in Soldiers and Sailors' Convention, because here soldiers and sailors become a collective noun, representing the members of one convention.

MAY APPLE, Baltimore.—In four handed euchre, partners, one player takes up the trump and plays alone. How many does it count when one of the players taking the trump has two or four?——You have evidently omitted something. If the player going alone takes three tricks, he scores one point; if he takes all five tricks, he counts four.

J. V., St. Louis, Mo.—It is difficult to decide who is the author of "Across the Continent," played by Oliver Doud Byron. It is alleged that Edward Spencer, of Baltimore, Md., wrote the original piece, but Mr. Byron purchased it he changed some of the scenes. We cannot, however, vouch for the truth of the above.

NIGGER.—Burnt cork is used to imitate the complexion of a Negro, but it will wear away and rub it on the face. It will easily wash off with soap and water. For ball purposes you should not black your hands, but wear black Lisle thread gloves. You can get them of the stock of Shannon, Miller and Crane, who advertise in the CLIPPER.

J. S. D.—1. We believe Davison, the German tragedian, was paid $1,000 per night for his performances in this city. We have no record at hand. 2. Edwin Booth and Edwin Forrest never received from any manager that amount per night in this city, although the former may have made that amount under his own management.

DEAR WILSON.—"Ille Teresa Carreno came to this country some few years since, when but a child, from South America, and performed in many cities as a child pianist; thence she went to Europe, and has recently returned with the Carlotta Patti Concert Troupe. She is now about 19 years of age.

T. M. 838, Chicago, Ill.—There was never a dramatic or variety theatre bearing the name you mention on the former's roll. There was a concert saloon, so-called, bearing the name of the Gaiety, in the second story of the building on Broadway same side as the Olympic Theatre, near Houston street, some years since.

H. A. ANANIAS, Canada.—1. Address the Athletic, Boston, Haymakers, Chicago, Mutual, Olympic, Cleveland, Eckford, Lotsonga, Beckford and Atlantic. In 1871, the Athletic, Atlantic, Lotsonga, Mutual, Cleveland, Eckford, Mansfield, Mutual, National, Olympic and Troy.

DELAWARE, Trenton, N. J.—In the presidential election in 1868, Seymour had majorities in Delaware, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland and Nevada. In Florida, Seymour had a majority of eleven by legislature, and in Mississippi and Texas there was no election.

SUBSCRIBER, Jr., Selma, Ala.—1. Johnny Keating and Dick Hollywood have fought twice, the first ending in a draw and the second being won by Dick, Keating breaking his arm. 2. No, he is a feather-weight, weighing 108 lbs. Hollywood's weight is 130 lbs.

READER, St. Louis, Mo.—The Red Tickets, as you state, having a majority of nineteen votes, and having been awarded credentials by the Congressional Convention, it is apparent that they were entitled to their seats, and political trickery should not have been permitted to oust them.

FOREST H., Baltimore.—1. The first sale determined the par value of the horse, $50. 2. Consequently, if after the third exchange, having drawn a full hand, the President's third exchange, in 1869, was $4,320. 3. Don't understand your third question.

STEEL.—1. When "Charles O'Malley" was produced at the Grand Opera House on Oct. 18th, 1869, with Edmund Falconer as Mickey Free, the late James Pilgrim, Jr., was the manager. 2. We cannot say positively whether that theatre was a financial success or not under his management, but think not.

ANDY DARRAGH ASH'S, Plymouth, Mich.—"Under the Gaslight" is the private property of the author, Mr. Augustin Daly, manager of the Avenue Theatre and Grand Opera House, this city, whom address.

ADDYSTONE.—"Carom" is right as an American technical term at billiards; it is derived from the French word "caramboler," meaning "to hit two balls at once; or, as the English have it, to cannon."

WOODCOCK, Philadelphia.—1. The dealer has no right to count his hand ahead of the others; the cards all being played, the various hands can be compared accurately. 2. When the dealer has one to go, and he turns up Jack, that puts him out at once.

CONSTANT READER.—At French bagatelle, if the cue ball hits a dead ball first, and then another into a cup or pocket, it counts against the party making the shot. The object of five ball must be struck first, to count for the player.

H. E. S., Somerville.—Your last statement presents the facts of the game. Each player had 5 holes and 5 aces, and the 10 holes filled out and game when he really was not out, then he forfeits the game.

J. F., Cleveland, O.—According to the latest census London, has a total of 3,251,804 inhabitants, or three millions and more, while the population of the seven largest cities in the United States amounts to 1,743,365 only.

CRICKET.—1. If there is a man on 1st base, and striker knocks a fly, can the man on 1st start for 2d before the ball is caught, following that it will be a catch?——Yes, but he does it at the risk of being put out on a double play.

R. D., St. Louis.—By writing to managers, stating your case as you have stated it to us, and giving them some idea of your talents in a dramatic line, you may meet with one who may give you a minor position, and help you along.

READER, Norwalk.—The second marriage being illegal, if the lady procures a divorce from the man she was first married to, she can marry again without getting a divorce from the second party.

SUBSCRIBER CARSON, Jackson, Miss.—1. It has never been stated, to our knowledge. 2. Heenan weighed 178 lbs. the day he fought John Sayers. 3. The English prize ring is without a champion now.

ADAMS, Boston.—1. The best time for six miles by a four-oared crew is 36m. 2. The best time for 4 miles, Sept. 30th, 1869, A. Fulton, George Price, S. Hutton and McLaren composed the crew. 2. The 1st disputed. 3. He is. 4. No, he did not. 5. There is none.

J. H. S., Georgetown, D. C.—The result is governed by the head of the state ticket; therefore, if Buckalew is elected governor, then the state will be declared to go democratic even if all the state officers who are republicans are elected.

TYRO, Evansville, Ind.—1. Respectfully declined. 2. Miss Bella Seaton is engaged to Mr. Daly for this season, but has not yet appeared.

W. O. K.—The score of the last even innings decides a match, unless the first part of the innings has been played. You go back to the 7th even innings.

OSMOND.—The Harvard nine defeated the Mutuals, June 22d, 1870, by 24 to 12. They also defeated the Athletics, in 1869, by 33 to 31.

MERRIMAC.—After the fielders have been afforded three chances for putting batsmen, or base runners, out, no runs can be longer earned, but base hits are to be scored wherever made.

J. B. C.—The returns of the North Carolina election have been published, but as they have not yet been certified by the secretary of state, they are not official.

WM. F., Chicago.—1. If not unconditionally that Judge Davis would be the next president, making no condition about his receiving the Cincinnati nomination, then he loses his bet.

BROOKLYN.—Notwithstanding your long statement, you have failed to say where you point to us to decide. If A is aware that B is a slippery customer, why does he play with him.

L. J. R., Dayton, O.—They are very cleverly worked up, but it is in a field that we hardly care to work in, so we will have to cast them.

D. M. B., Monroe, La.—1. He is a son of Charles Francis Adams. 2. A person 18 years old cannot be made of age by law in any state. 3. In Kentucky.

J. E. R., Fit Hole, Pa.—A and B are entitled to the first two choices, throwing off which takes the first choice. C is entitled to the third, and F to the fourth.

SPORT, Birmingham, Ala.—Tom Maco and Joe Cobern fought near Bay St. Louis, Miss., Nov. 30, 1871, a draw being declared at the end of 8 hours and 35 minutes.

AN OLDER.—The subject is one that requires greater care and attention than you seem to have bestowed upon it, and we are obliged to omit it.

P. D. F., Cincinnati, O.—An advertisement occupying the space of the one you refer to will cost $21,84 for three months, cash in advance.

S. HAYS, Honesdale, Pa.—Tim Hays, clog dancer, at our latest advices, was performing at Marshall's Opera House, Grand Rapids, Mich.

C. J. S., Ottawa, Ont.—When last heard from the Gregory family were performing in India, en route to England from Australia. Mrs. Gregory died some months ago.

H. M. M., Three Oaks, Mich.—Any of the goblets will do for musical glasses, the sound being regulated by the quantity of water in each.

LOOKOUTOUS VOLUPTUOSUS, Troy.—The fastest time in which 100 miles was ever trotted in this country was 8 hours, 55 min., 83 sec., by Conqueror, November 19th, 1863.

C. E. Y., Somerville, Mass.—We know nothing about the stuff. Our stuff is, as a rule, through neat, handle not, the unclean thing."

If you desire to preserve your liberty.

LANDLORD, Trenton.—On one or two occasions when holidays happened on our regular day of issue, the time was anticipated, and the CLIPPER printed and sold on Monday evening.

HAY SCOAN, St. Louis.—As C and D cannot count game until both low and Jack are first scored by their opponents, it follows that they are gimmied.

RANDOM RONALD.—As there are no recognized rules for the government of the game, you must make your own before commencing play. We cannot decide the point.

HENRY C., Elmira, N. Y.—A player can throw as his hand if he has neither ace, face, nor trump card in it.

C. L. SCH., Harrisburg.—In this country the pike and pickerel are different names, but in England, young pike are termed pickerel.

J. W. F., Cleveland, O.—Want of space caused by a large influx of advertisements compels us at times to curtail our correspondents' favors.

CONSTANT READER.—Dan Bryant has acted Shasta the Poet in "Azrah an Prince of Jerusalem," and Adelaide Murray has often acted Michael Feeny in that drama.

W. H. G., Doylestown, Pa.—The Academy of Music, Philadelphia, Pa., will seat 3,336 persons; Booth's Theatre, New York, will seat 1,800; and Wallack's, 1,200.

J. O. S., Cincinnati.—Number one loses his bet, which was that he would knock down one pin or more; his quibble, "more or one," being poor consolation.

J. C., Philadelphia.—The age does not pass under any circumstances. It cannot be transferred to the next player from its actual holder.

CLUB HOUSE, St. Louis.—Announce to the dealer that you copper the two cases cards for $12.80 each, and play the third card to win for $24.

RETROGNOSIARAMA.—1. Geo. W. Garrison still lives. 2. It is a matter of taste, some of our less cultivated readers admiring a "bit of that sort." 3. The lady is "single yet."

ONE OR FOUR, Washington, D. C.—See answer to "Tacony," which will fully and correctly meet the case, your question not being very clearly stated.

W. H. G., Troy, N. Y.—Cool Burgess is alive, and performed recently in San Francisco, Cal.

SUBSCRIBER, Chicago, Ill.—We never heard of a frog and easy thus named. See answer to "L. M. 808."

A. C. C.—Billy Edwards was never a principal in a prize fight prior to his battle with Collyer, on Aug. 5th, 1868.

WHITING.—We have no record of the quickest time in which the feat has been accomplished, but an hour is thought very fair.

OLD SUBSCRIBER.—The rules governing the race governed bets also: consequently the man who bet upon the Bell loses.

H. C., Louisville, Ky.—Because your manager stated, as we have been informed, that he did not care for it.

J. L., Indianapolis, Ind.—We have tried several who always neglected their duty, and do not care to risk another trial.

HALL TOSSER.—The club winning the most total games of all the matches played wins the championship.

CRICKET.—The last professional team that came out here was not the strongest eleven of that year.

YOUNG SPORT.—It was in 1869 that the Reds won every game played except one, and that was a tie.

ROBERT, Fort Wayne.—Ira Paine never shot one hundred successive pigeons in a match.

R. M.—In most games, in cutting, ace is low, except in cutting for money, when it is high.

MACK, Phila.—At peanuckel, if a player miscounts and calls game, when he really is not out, he forfeits the game.

RECORDER'S OFFICE, Fond du Lac, Wis.—Write to Stephen Roberts or Ingersoll & Co., in our care.

CHAS. PARKER, Troy.—Jim Mace was born in April, 1831; John Morrissey, Feb. 5, 1831.

ED. CARNEY, U. S. S. Shawmut.—William Varley, alias "Reddy the Blacksmith," is alive, and keeps a saloon in this city.

SPORT.—Tom Hyer and Yankee Sullivan fought in February, 1849.

"UNCLE JIM," Philadelphia.—Thank you for a fresh instalment of interesting old programmes.

J. J. McC., Cincinnati.—Christopher Columbus has always received credit for his great achievement.

M. R. S., London, Eng.—We do not know of any such firm, and their names do not appear in the city directory.

LONG BALLYHOUN.—1. They lead for the second position. 2. We prefer Hall.

S. R. D., Delta, La.—Lexington ran his great match against time at New Orleans, April 2, 1855.

R. F. W., Ottawa, Ill.—A loser, having failed to beat B two games out of three. The drawn game counts as one.

I. McC., Liberty, Pa.—A horse can gain a record for time made on a short track.

FOOT, Philadelphia.—You will find the rules of the game of 15 ball pool in Phelan's Hand-Book of Billiards.

K., Athol.—The fastest time made by Jennie at the Springfield, Mass., meeting last Fall, was 2:29¼.

P. M., Providence, R. I.—The fastest time ever made by American Girl was 2:17¼, at Buffalo, August 9th, 1872.

STRANGE, Springfield.—The letters from New York to Liverpool at 5 cents, 10 cents; to Bremen, between 3,400 and 3,500 miles.

P. H., Toronto, Ont.—The characters named are both first old women.

J. S., Toledo, O.—Dexter made his fastest time, 2:17¾, at Buffalo, and not at Chicago, therefore M loses his bet.

FIVE POUNDS, Philadelphia.—It would not have been four aces. The pack was a foul deck, and the deal was void.

C. B., Walden, N. Y.—The last five does not form a sequence, as the previous five prevented the run.

BALL PLAYER.—They must return in the same order as they run the bases, unless one is put out in the mean time.

MUNRO, Chicago.—Having played his seven on the board, B could not recall it to play his eight.

YOU SAY, Cincinnati, O.—Cincinnati was never the third largest city in the United States.

SPORT, Cincinnati, O.—The rules governing the race governed bets also: consequently the man who bet upon the Bell loses.

TEXAS ROYAL.—Among the theatrical stars of the season, few of higher magnitude or brighter lustre have lately risen above our horizon than Miss Mordaunt. * * * "Darling; or, Woman and her Master," in which she played six different characters, was received throughout with unbounded applause.—Montreal Herald.
Miss Mordaunt's powers in the serio-comic line are of no mean order. In "Woman and her Master," her representation of the three widely different characters—Rocky Ann Jones, a New England Miss; Peculiar, an old negress, and the Irish maid of all work—fairly astonished her audience, so great were the change and so truthful the delineation.—Montreal Star. 27-1t*

MISS LAURA KEENE,
on the invitation of LITERARY and CHRISTIAN
YOUNG MEN'S ASSOCIATIONS, will give a SERIES of
COSTUME RECITALS,
ILLUSTRATED POEMS,
Throughout the States, aided by the arts of
PAINTING, COSTUMES, MUSIC, and MLLE. CLARA STELLA, pupil of MADAME EMMA SELLER, with SIGNOR G. MORGHI, pianist to the KING OF ITALY.
Miss Keene's inaugural recital was given before a Convention of Methodist Episcopal Ministers, at Cooper Institute, on the 9th of September last. She held her audience spell-bound by pathos, or convulsed them with laughter at comedy. The fresh young voice and pure method of Mlle. CLARA STELLA were a surprise to the audience. Organizations desiring to secure the services of this lady, together with charming entertainment from LAURA KEENE, THE FAIREST, THE GRACEFUL, THE PATRONIZED, can address at early date to AMERICAN LITERARY BUREAU, Cooper Institute, New York.
LAURA KEENE AT MUSIC HALL.
This distinguished artiste appeared last evening before a fashionable audience at Music Hall, and if a more delighted one could not well be spied. Gone after Gone was rendered by the gifted Lauren, with great power and pathos, then a quaint and characteristic bit of vocal art by a very superior artiste, Miss Clara Stella, and Laura Keene in her inimitable Mrs. Malaprop, which she has made famous in this country. "A Morning Call" by Miss Keene and Mr. Vincent, was something that will make her name for a long time to come forever Miss Keene will be seen in her specialty she has become most agreeably received by dilettanti audiences. This is no chip-on-a-"shoe" but a really artistic and intellectual entertainment, such as we are constrained to say, is seldom to be met with. Kingston (Can.) Daily News.
Applications from halls of theatre managers for the services of Miss Keene and party to be made to

TO MANAGERS.
By referring to the columns of the Clipper you will see an advertisement over the signature of R. CORRIE, in which he states that he has the only regular theatre in Omaha, that the seating capacity is 1,000, and that attractions playing with him can arrange dates in Kansas City, Leavenworth, Atchison, Lawrence, &c., and as a legitimate manager, I consider it my duty to warn others of the fact. 1st. HE HAS NOT "the only regular theatre in Omaha," for I have this season inaugurated with "Humpty Dumpty" and the "Black Crook," REID OPERA HOUSE. This is a model theatre, and complete in every particular, and one of the prettiest theatres in the west, with seating capacity for 800, besides standing room. 2d. He has managed the theatre advertised by this party, and, by actual count, the entire orchestra and dress circle has 56 chairs, and seating capacity in the gallery for 200; making 256. (He advertises 1,000). 3d. I am the sole lessee of Omaha Opera House, Kansas City and Leavenworth, and they can only be negotiated for through me or my agents. I own and control all the bill boards (except St. Joe) over this entire circuit. 4th. I warn all managers that his advertisement is "A TRICK OF TRADE" to deceive managers and combinations into making engagements with him. I submit this to managers without any comment on the actions of H. Corri. JOHN A. STEVENS, Manager, Grand Opera House, Memphis, and the Western Star Circuit. 27-3t*

NOTICE.

ADVERTISERS must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We never answer questions by mail. All addressed to us seeking information will be answered through this column only.

BASE BALL, Baltimore.—"1. There is a man on the first base, the striker hits a good ball, which is stopped by the second baseman, who (without waiting for the man at first to arrive at second) fields the ball to first, in order to make a double play; but he throws wildly, and the striker makes his first, thus frustrating the attempt at a double play. Now, is the man running to second to be considered out, although he was not touched by the ball? 2. A ball is struck which goes right for the short stop, who is awaiting it, but right in front of him it strikes a stone or an uneven portion of the ground and bounds far above his head, beyond his reach. Is this to be considered an error for the fielder, and is a base hit to be counted for the striker? 3. No errors have yet been made by the field. The striker knocks up an easy fly, which is muffed, this being the first error for the field. He gets home on good hits by his successors at the bat, and before any more errors are made by the field. Is his run earned? 4. A man is at the bat who has made two strikes. A man on first is then put out whilst trying to steal to second, making the third hand out. Does the man who is at the bat go first to the bat the next innings, or the next batter after him? 5. No errors have as yet been made by the field. The striker makes a good base hit and reaches second base. He attempts to make third, and does so only through a bad muff of the third baseman. He gets home before any other errors are made during this one. Is his run earned, although he has had a life given him? 6. Can only those runs be considered earned which are made by men who have made base hits? (Of course, I mean if the runs are scored before three errors have been made.)" 1. Yes, he was forced off. 2. It is not an error, nor can it rightly be given as a base hit. 3. His run is not earned, because, but for an error, he would have been out. 4. The man who follows the last man out out goes to the bat. 5. No, as he made one of the bases by an error. 6. Only by players who have made base hits.

L. STODDMAN.—The match you refer to was reported by our regular Philadelphia correspondent whom we have hitherto found reliable. In his deciding that the ball caught by George Wright was a catch, however, he was in error. The point of play arranged by Harry Wright to be tried on the Athletics in this game was based on an erroneous interpretation of the rules, inasmuch as in base ball, as in cricket, a ball caught by a player with his hat or cap is dead for putting the striker out in the case in point the striker was not only not out, but he had to strike over again. This rule needs amending so far as to make this catching a ball by the cap a dead ball in every respect, as it has hitherto been considered. Had we been umpire in the game we should have decided the striker out, the ball dead to the extent of forcing the striker to run first base, and consequently dead as to forcing the other men off the bases. If this cap catch rag were allowed there would be endless disputes on points of play, although to judge which would result in the long run.

ALPHA.—"It bets that Governor Hoffman has not the same power to enforce the New York eight hour law in this state that is established in Illinois to enforce the congressional law in the United States. Is he right?" ——Gov. Hoffman can only enforce the eight hour law in this state in works directly under the authority and pay of the state. President Grant's power extends to all works throughout the extent of the United States, and he also claims the power to direct payment to all government employees who have worked ten hours a day since the passage of the eight hour bill, to extra pay for the additional two hours a day, although this is in opposition to the opinion of the attorney general.

VIVES TERRA.—1. At chess, a player may call for as many moves in succession as getting pawns into his opponent's "royal road" or "king row," so you lose. 2. When, at billiards, a player's ball is in hand, the reds are in the string, and his opponent's ball is in the string, the latter is entitled to a fair hit at both, or he can commute a "foul" by not hitting, for safety, cause his ball to go out of the string and return. 3. At poker, a straight flush, when played, which should be agreed on before commencing, beats three of a kind. 4. The above agreement, if any, and nothing made to that effect, a player cannot call for his partner's best card and play it alone, at euchre.

G. W. H.—1. A bet of $100 each on New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania being carried by Horace Greeley. Claims that if either of the above states goes for Grant, A loses $300. A claims that it is $400 on each state, and that if one goes for Grant, he wins on that account, and that Colfax, Wilson or Brownlow will carry it for Grant, A or C?" ——As the bet was $400 on each state, if one of them goes for Greeley and the other two for Grant, C will win both A's. If one comes, then A will win $100 of C. It is not a straight event bet, as stated above.

LUCKY.—1. Our decision is based on justice to all parties. Each player, in turn, has a right to pass upon the question of the trump card as it is settled. Should A, left of the dealer, pass, B, to the next player succeeding him, and the dealer last. If No. 2 offers to assist the dealer, his partner, and the latter, upon that offer, does assist, it deprives No. 3 of his right, in regular order, to assist A. If also assists, then the dealer cannot legally do. 2. The book is not without errors.

DA COSTA.—"A man is on each of the 1st, 2d and 3d bases, when a grounder is knocked between short stop and second base, which the former fields to the first base in time to put the batter out and put the man out running from 1st to 2d; but before getting it there the batter has made his 1st, and the man on 3d has scored." 1. Both runs. 2. Does the run score? 3. Yes.

COUPER, Savannah.—1. The partner of the dealer has that privilege, but the latter cannot go alone. 2. In all fours, where each have scored five, the party making low, Jack, go out before those counting game. 3. Jack counts one for high, low and Jack. 4. Yes, except in a misdeal. 5. Where no trumps are out, there can be no high nor low.

PETRO, Albany, N. Y.—It is customary in writing of the joint authors or possessors of anything, in the possessive case, to use only one apostrophe. We are of opinion that only one apostrophe should be used in Soldiers and Sailors' Convention, because there are soldiers and sailors composing a collective noun, representing the members of one convention.

MAY APPLE, Baltimore.—In four handed euchre, partners, one player takes up the trump and plays alone. How many does it count? 2. When the jack is turned up, the time was anticipated, and the Cuzzens packed your city on Monday evening.

HAVERSTOCK, St. Louis.—As C and D cannot count game until both low and Jack are first scored by their opponents, it follows that they are stumped.

ROCKY BOWER.—As there are no recognized rules for the government of the game, you must make your own before commencing play. We cannot decide the point.

HARRY J., Elmira, N. Y.—No player can throw up his hand if he has neither ace, face, nor trump card in it.

C. L. McC., Hartsgrove.—In this country the pike and pickerel are different fishes, but in England, young pike are termed pickerel.

J. W. P., Cleveland, O.—Want of space caused by a large influx of advertisements compels us at times to curtail our correspondents' favors.

CONSTANT READER.—Dan Bryant has acted Uncle Tom Pratt in "Ayrah na Pogue," and Dr. Nicholas Murray has often acted Michael Feeny in that drama.

W. H. G., Doylestown, Pa.—The Academy of Music, Philadelphia, Pa., will seat 4,124 persons; Booth's Theatre, New York, will seat 1,707, and Wallack's 1,297.

J. O. B., Chetwood.—Number one loses his bet, which was that he would knock down one pin or more; his quibble, "more or less," being part of the bet.

S. P., Utica.—1. It is not absolutely essential that the mouth of a good ratter should be black. 2. At casino, the lowest card deals, and ace is low.

A. J. Mc.—The son of an American minister, accredited to a foreign court, although born abroad, is born under the United States flag, and therefore eligible to be elected president.

J. T. B., Newark.—Tom Spring beat Jack Langan at Worcester, Eng., Jan. 7th, 1824, and at Birdham bridge, near Chichester, June 8th, the same year.

J. C., Philadelphia.—The age does not pass under any circumstances. It cannot be transferred to the next player from its actual holder.

CLUB HOUSE, St. Louis.—Announce to the dealer that you copper the two case cards for $12.30 each, and play the third card to win for $25.

RECREATIONARIA.—1. Geo. W. Garrison still lives. 2. It is a matter of taste, some of our less cultivated readers admiring a "bit of that sort." 3. The lady is "single yet."

OFF OR FOUL, Washington, D. C.—See answer to "TACONY," which will probably meet the case, your question not being very clearly stated.

W. H. G., Troy, N. Y.—Cool Burgess is alive, and performed recently in San Francisco, Cal.

SUBSCRIBER, Chicago, Ill.—We never heard of a free and easy thus named. See answer to "L. M. 808."

A. C. C.—Billy Edwards was never a principal in a prize fight prior to his battle with Collyer, on Aug. 24th, 1869.

WHITING.—We have no record of the quickest time in which the feat has been accomplished, but an hour is thought very fair.

OLD SUBSCRIBER.—The rules governing the race governed bets also: consequently the man who bet upon the Bell loses.

H. C., Louisville, Ky.—Because your manager stated, as we have been informed, that he did not care for it.

J. L., Indianapolis, Ind.—We have tried several who always neglected their duty, and do not care to risk another trial.

BALL TOSSER.—The club winning the most total games of all the matches played wins the championship.

CRICKET.—The last professional team that came out here was not the strongest eleven of that year.

YOUNG SPORT.—It was in 1869 that the Reds won every game played except one, and that was a tie.

ROBERT, Fort Wayne.—Ira Paine never shot one hundred successive pigeons in a match.

R. M.—In most games, in cutting, ace is low, except in cutting for money, when it is high.

MACK, Phila.—At peanuckel, if a player miscounts and calls game, when he really is not out, he forfeits the game.

READER of this PAPER, Bristol, Wis.—Write to Stephen Roberts or Ingersoll & Co., in our cars.

CHAS. PARKER, Troy.—Jim Mace was born in April, 1851; John Morrissey, Feb. 1, 1831.

ED. CARNEY, U. S. S. Shawmut.—William Varley, alias "Paddy the Blacksmith," is alive, and keeps a saloon in this city.

SPORT.—Tom Hyer and Yankee Sullivan fought in February, 1849.

"UNCLE JIM," Philadelphia.—Thanks you for a fresh instalment of interesting old programmes.

J. McC., Uncinnati.—Christopher Columbus has always received credit for that achievement.

M. B. S., London, Eng.—We do not know of any such firm, and their names do not appear in the city directory.

LOUIS BALMONDE.—1. They lead for the second position. 2. We prefer Ball.

S. D., Delta, La.—Lexington ran his great match against time at New Orleans, April 2, 1844.

E. F. W., Ottumwa, Ia.—A loose, having failed to beat B two games out of three. The drawn game counts as one.

I. McC., Liberty, Pa.—A horse can gain a record for time made on a short track.

POOL, Philadelphia.—You will find the rules of the game of 15 ball pool in Phelan's Hand-Book of Billiards.

K., Athol.—The fastest time made by Jennie at the Springfield, Mass., Meeting, Aug. 29th, was 2:22¼.

F. M., Providence, R. I.—The fastest time ever made by American Girl was 2:17¼, at Buffalo, August 9th, 1872.

J. H., Walden, N. Y.—The last five does not form a sequence, as the previous 5's prevented the run.

A BALL PLAYER.—They must return in the same order as they run the bases, and in cutting corps was good.

MUNRO, Chicago.—Having played his seven on the board, B could not recall it to play his eight.

YOUNG MAN, Cincinnati, O.—Cincinnati was never the third largest city in the United States.

OLD SUBSCRIBER.—The rules governing the race governed bets also: consequently the man who bet upon the Bell loses.

C. L. G., Urbana, O.—Back numbers are only valuable when there is a demand for them.

J. W. B., Bridgeport, Ct.—Geo. Topley walked eight miles in 59 min. 39 sec., in England.

AQUATIC, Portsmouth, Va.—It would occupy more space to answer your question than we can devote to it.

SIR.—Two only out of the 22 Philadelphia players were born in England.

RUNAWAY, Camp Douglas.—A sweep counts when the game is counted after all the cards are dealt and played.

KEY WEST.—1. It is not correct in some sections. 2. Yankee Sullivan was born in Tipperary, near Cork, Ireland.

KIT CLARKE.—The "sugar" bet on Sept. 14th was received all right.

J. M. M., Green River.—Will probably use them.

OLD SUBSCRIBER.—Although actually finally played will count.

I. C. U., Erie.—Respectfully declined.

BASE BALL.—There is no such book published.

C. H.—Cannot say. The Nutuals have not engaged players yet.

GLASGOW, Scotland.—Don't know exactly.

A. F. P., Corry.—Fernando Wood was born June 14th, 1812.

C. H. T., St. Davids.—It is correct in the main.

CHARLESTON.—You can enter a match against Harry Kelley.

OLIVER CRANE.—Read reply to L. Stockman.

J. S., Jr., Cobleskill.—Declined.

ARCHI-BALD MEAD.—Will probably be used.

BEACON LIGHT, Baltimore.—See answer to "Pinkey B."

HAVERHILL.—Cannot say until the season closes.

J. L. Y., Lowell.—1. No. 2.

NEWS OF THE WEEK BOILED DOWN.

☞ About 150 farmers from New York, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Jersey, met in this city on the 24th ult., for the purpose of discussing the milk question and to organize a grand milk company. It was stated that out of 500 samples examined by Prof. Chandler 470, were adulterated, and that out of $13,000,000 worth of milk consumed annually in the metropolis only $5,000,000 reach the farmers, the balance going to the middlemen.

☞ Contrary to his announced intention of holding his peace on political matters, Gen. Butler made a speech at Lynn, Sept. 23d. Garibaldi addressed a meeting at Chambery, department of Savoy. He requested the prohibition of public banquets in celebration of the day, but advised his hearers to cheer the name of the present republic, which was popular. An attempt was made at Marseilles to hold a public banquet, but it was broken up by the authorities.

☞ The Cunard steamship China, which left Liverpool, Eng., on Sept. 21st, was disabled at Queenstown by the breaking of her machinery, and had to return to the former port. Her mails and 70 passengers were transferred to the Calabria, which sailed on the 24th inst. The mails and the remaining passengers were forwarded by the Russia later in the week.

☞ The writ of habeas corpus obtained by Billy Forrester's counsel, and which was returnable on Sept. 25th, was withdrawn by request of the prisoner, who, on the evening of the 26th ult., started for Joliet, Ill., in charge of two of Pinkerton's men and the keeper of Joliet prison, to serve out his thirteen years unexpired prison term.

☞ An accident occurred on the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, near Dudley, N. C., on the 26th ult. The ladies' car and sleeping car were precipitated down an embankment, the former turning completely over, and the latter lying on the track. Much work into the stream, nearly twenty feet below. Many were injured, but none dangerously.

☞ An important emigration was made by the United Order of American Mechanics at Newark, N. J., on Sept. 26th. There were counties representing every city in the state of importance, numbering not less than fifty-two, and it is estimated that 7,000 men in regalia were in line.

☞ In the case of fleming & Pearse against the U. S. Insurance Company, to recover the value of cotton burned on the steamer Progress, on the Red river, and which was the first, a verdict of $175,000 for the plaintiffs was given in the U. S. Circuit Court, at Louisville, Ky., on the 24th ult.

☞ The Northern Ohio Lunatic Asylum, at Newburg, was destroyed by fire on the 26th ult. The 500 inmates are said to be safe, but a number have escaped and are still at large. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

☞ Affidavits taken at Salt Lake City on the 26th ult. fully corroborate the testimony of Bishop Smith concerning the Mountain Meadow massacre, and give further details, showing more positively the guilt of the Mormon leaders.

☞ There is much snow in the mountains between Brandtown and Wahsatch, Utah, on the night of Sept. 26th, the drifts being three feet deep, and telegraph wires being blown down.

☞ The United States inspectors in the case of the loss of the Bound steamer Metis censure the captain and crew in their report. They also revoke the licenses of the captain and first and second pilots, and suspend that of the chief mate for six months.

☞ There is no abatement in the railroad war in San Francisco, Cal., and a legal investigation is to be made into the serious charges of bribery against the supervisors, against whom public opinion seems to be unanimous.

☞ A cable dispatch from London, Eng., states that efforts are being made to require the Messrs. Laird, constructors of the Confederate privateer Alabama, to pay a portion of the sum awarded to the United States by the Geneva tribunal.

BALTIMORE vs. ATHLETIC.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE CLIPPER.

The last game of the championship series between the Athletics and Baltimores was played on the former's grounds on the afternoon of Sept. 28th. The Baltimore contingent came over and arrived on the ground at 2:30 P. M., and at once began practice for the next day's innings bat for will throws of Mackey and Fisler, the former's throw passing the third baseman. Mack made a couple of runs on batted balls, and then scored the other run made by the Athletics. The score was as follows:—

ATHLETIC vs. BALTIMORE.

A Drawn Game.

The ninth championship game between the Athletics, of Philadelphia, and the Baltimores, of Baltimore, was commenced on the afternoon of Sept. 28th, on the ground of the former club. In the eight preceding games the Athletics had won five and lost three, as will be seen by a glance at the appended table:—

Date.	Club.	Score.	Where Played.
May 1, Athletic	34	Baltimore....19	Philadelphia.
June 11, Athletic	14	Baltimore....3	Philadelphia.
June 12, Athletic	10	Baltimore....17	Baltimore.
June 25, Athletic	24	Baltimore....9	Baltimore.

Sept. 5, Athletic	7	Baltimore....6	Philadelphia.
Sept. 26, Athletic	11	Baltimore....6	Baltimore.
Sept. 28, Athletic	7	Baltimore....7	Philadelphia.
Totals	134		67

The weather on the occasion of the match in question was remarkably favorable, and the attendance large. The betting was even in the early part of the afternoon, but after the Baltimorewards reverted around to even before the game commenced. The Athletics presented their usual nine, but not in the positions in which they started at the commencement, viz:—Malone, catching, Mack playing shortstop, and this was found to work very well. The baltimores made a change in their nine, Fisher and Hastings acting as pitcher and catcher, and Carey playing second base, while Force, Mills and Carter did service, the latter in the left field. The Athletics lost the toss, and Mr. N. E. Young, formerly the business manager of the Baltimore Club, having been selected as umpire, the game commenced at 3.30 P. M.

The Athletics were in the first innings before a much larger crowd than was present at the match between the same clubs, which was put out, two being earned by safe hits by Cuthbert, Anson and Reach, while McBride had a life given him by Radcliff. Higham made a neat catch at right field that settled Malone, and Fisler made a clean hit to left field. The Baltimores made one run, Force getting the base by an excusable error of Anson's, and being sent home by a splendid two-base hit of Fisler's, which was captured by Mills, who made a good throw of Malone's. Treacy caught a liner from Higham's bat very neatly.

In the second innings, a very bad miss by Higham at short-field let Radcliff (who followed) get to first, says the Athletics as two runs. Mack and Anson making the one base hits and the latter being left.....The Baltimores received a blank as their share of the second innings, although Hastings, Pike and Carey made their bases by good hits, the first named, however, being put out by a splendid throw of Malone's to Fisler at second base.

The Athletics were put in one, two, three order in the third innings by easy fly catches by Carey, Radcliff and Hall.....The Baltimores were also whitewashed, McGeary concluding the innings by a pretty catch of Force's on the centre second at 7 to 8 in their favor. In the next three innings the Mutuals scored 5 runs to the Atlantics' 2, when run getting ceased on both sides, the final result being the success of the Atlantics by the appended score:—

FALL REGATTA OF THE SCHUYLKILL NAVY.

The annual fall races of the Schuylkill Navy came off on the quiet river bearing that name, which flows past Philadelphia, on the afternoon of Saturday, Sept. 28th, and a more favorable day for the sport could not have been desired. Crowds congregated on the banks of the river during the course. The regatta was to have started at 3 P. M., but it was 3.30 before the Falls bridge, and returning, making a total distance of nearly four miles, was fixed upon as the course. The regatta was to have started from Rockland Landing, above Columbia bridge, but never eventuated, for before the Falls bridge, and returning, making a total distance of nearly four miles, was fixed upon as the course. NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.
I here take occasion to thank Mr. Walter Keeble and his talented troupe for the manner in which they supported and assisted me in making my new play of FIDELIA the unparalleled success that it undoubtedly was.—LITTLE NELL. "Fidelia, the Fire Waif," including the grievous battery and nitro-gyrostique sensations. The above-named play and sensations have been duly copyrighted and protected by the laws, according to the statutes, and any infringement upon my rights will be fully prosecuted to the extent of the law. Respectfully, LITTLE NELL, the California Diamond.—Albany, N. Y., Sept. 28th, 1872. 27-1t*

SPECIAL NOTICE.

READ THE FOLLOWING OPINIONS OF THE PRESS:—
THEATRE ROYAL.—Among the theatrical stars of the season, few of higher magnitude or brighter lustre have lately risen above our horizon than Miss Mordaunt. * * * * "Darling; or, Woman and her Master," in which she played six different characters, was received throughout with unbounded applause.—Montreal Herald.
Miss Mordaunt's powers in the serio-comic line are of no mean order. In "Woman and her Master," her representations of the three widely different characters—Becky Jones, a New England Miss; Peculiar, an old negress, and the Irish maid of all work—fairly astonished her audience, so great were the changes and so truthful the delineation.—Montreal Star. 27-1t*

MISS LAURA KEENE,
on the invitation of LITERARY and CHRISTIAN
YOUNG MEN'S ASSOCIATIONS, will give a SERIES of
COSTUME RECITALS,
ILLUSTRATED POEMS,
Throughout the States, aided by the arts of
PAINTING, COSTUMES, MUSIC, and MLLE. CLARA STELLA, pupil of MADAME EMMA BELLOC, with SIGNOR G. MOROSINI, pianist to the KING OF ITALY.
The Keene's inaugural recital was given before a Convention of Methodist Episcopal Ministers, on the 11th of September, and the book for entertainment specially bound by parties, or any refined group with intelligence or sympathy. The fresh young voice and keen intellect of Mlle. CLARA STELLA, every a surprise to the Conventions, and the pianist, Signor MOROSINI, the lion of the locale with charming selections from CHOPIN, THALBERG and STRAKOSCH, on one of ALBERT WEBER'S choice-toned pianos.
Letters of introduction to Pastors of churches at early date in AMERICAN LITERARY BUREAU, Cooper Institute, New York.
LAURA KEENE AT MUSIC HALL.
This distinguished actress opened last evening before a fashionable audience of ladies and gentlemen. Her reception was overwhelming and well it might. Gone after Gems was rendered by the gifted actress with great power and pathos, then a quiet and delightful bit of vocal art by every appropriate action, Clara Stella and Signor Morosini followed in their respective specialties in this evening. "A Morning Call" by Miss Keene and Mr. Couldock, was a comedy that will make the rounds for a long time. Whenever Miss Keene and her excellent company can be seen they will be greeted by delighted audiences. This is an elite-rich "Show" but a really artistic entertainment, and as such we are constrained to say, nothing more this time.—Kingston (Can.) News.

TO MANAGERS.
By referring to the columns of the Clipper you will see an advertisement over the signature of H. CORRIE, in which he states that he has the only regular theatre in Omaha that will seat a sitting capacity is 1,000, and that attractions playing with him can arrange dates in Kansas City, Leavenworth, &c. THIS IS A DECEPTION, and, as a legitimate manager I consider it my duty to warn others of the fact. MR. HAS NOT "the only regular theatre in Omaha," for I have this season inaugurated with "Humpty Dumpty" and the "Black Crook," REDECKE'S NEW AND BEAUTIFUL OPERA HOUSE. This is a model theatre, and complete in every particular, and one of the prettiest theatres in the west, with seating capacity for 800, besides standing room. 2d. I have managed the theatre advertised by this party, and, by actual count, the entire orchestra and dress circle have but 36 chairs, and the gallery but 200; making 236. (He advertises 1,000). 3d. I am the sole lessee of the Opera House, Kansas City and Leavenworth, and they can only be negotiated for through me or my agents. 4th. I own and control all the halls boards (except G. Lee) over this entire circuit. 5th. I warn all managers that his advertisement is a "TRICK OF 'SO LADEN'" to deceive troupes and combinations into making engagements with him. I publish this to managers without any comment on the actions of H. Corrie. JOHN A. STEVENS, Manager, Grand Opera House, Memphis, and the Western Star Circuit. 27-3t*

LOVE'S QUERY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"Will he come?
The stars are paling—the moon is dim—
While all a-weary I wait for him;
For him the one to my heart most dear;
Worlds would I give were he only here—
Will he come?
"Will he come?
I pause and listen—adown the street
I hear the patter of passing feet;
Other sweet-hearts to their loved ones go—
O, sweetest of sweets, why tarry so?
Will he come?"

He won't come!
Early this morning your fellar, you see,
Started out on a bit of a jamboree.
To tell you the truth, the young chap got high,
And he punched another youth in the eye,
So he can't come.

He can't come—
'Cos the coppers they seized your sweet young man
In a manner as only coppers can;
And there, in the midst of his wild carouse,
They toted him off to the station-house;
That's why he can't come! J. H. B.

SEDUCTION AND BASTARDY.

A trial has been commenced before Justice Wilkins, at Middletown, O., styled "The Randall-Potter Seduction Case," in which the state of Ohio prosecutes James Potter, arrested on two charges—one of bastardy and the other of seduction—on the complaint of Adaline Randall, a young woman of the same town. From the fact that both parties were well known in the place, and the complainant being a rather good-looking female of about seventeen years, considerable interest and local curiosity were taken in the hearing of the case by the young bloods of Middletown.

Upon the charge of seduction the counsel for the state desired a continuance on account of the absence of several important witnesses. They, however, signified their readiness to try the bastardy case at once. Justice Wilkins was satisfied that the state had used due diligence to secure the attendance of the witnesses, and it would be a great hardship to require the state to enter into a hearing without being fully prepared. The attorneys on both sides then agreed to begin the examination upon the charge of seduction, the state reserving the right of introducing absent witnesses when their presence could be obtained. The trial promised to be a lengthy one, but the nature of the charges is summed up in the following rather rich and racy statement of the prosecuting witness. Adaline Randall, a rather good-looking girl of nearly seventeen summers, was called, and took the witness' seat. She has a very pleasant countenance, and, judging from her looks, she would be easily susceptible to the advances of the opposite sex. She may be said to be in that condition peculiarly interesting to "ladies who love their lords," and was apparently in an advanced stage of fruitfulness, bordering on parturition.

"I live in Middletown, and was sixteen years old last April, the eighth day. I became acquainted with Potter about a year ago. I got acquainted with him on the street. Mr. Hinckley gave me an introduction to him. Potter afterward got in the habit of calling on me at my sister's house, and he was a frequent visitor there. Mrs. Mat. McFarland is the name of my sister. He promised to marry me in January last. He was then in the habit of calling on me every evening. He promised me three times that he would marry me, and had connection with me after he had so promised. This occurred after night. He said he would marry me and see that I was taken care of, and it was under those promises that I allowed him to have intercourse with me. He continued to go in my company for two months after that, and then stopped. I was not visiting in company with any one else. Before I saw him I was a chaste and virtuous girl." The witness here named several families in Middletown with whom she had associated, to show that her reputation for respectability was good.

Upon being cross-examined she testified that Hinckley introduced her to Potter on the street, in the eastern part of Middletown about a year ago, that he was waiting only while her sister, when they met the two men casually, and the introduction took place. This was about seven o'clock in the evening. Mr. Hinckley was a married man. She was then asked by Judge Hume why she was out with a married man that time in the evening, but the counsel for the state objected, and the court sustained the objection. The witness then proceeded to state that she met Hinckley in company with Potter, and was introduced by him to the latter; that Potter afterward visited her at Mrs. Stein's saloon in the room last winter, but she could not remember how many times; that he met her at her mother's house four or five times in February last, and that about the 1st of February he promised to marry her, and before that he had promised to do so. He promised her twice at her mother's house. At that time she was not going with any other man, nor having any intercourse with other men.

Judge Hume here reminded her of her whether she had not rode out with married men and others, and had intercourse with them, to which question the state objected, on the ground that the chastity of the complainant could not be attacked without specifying particular acts, and naming the persons, time and places, and to an interminable discussion and the production of sundry law reports. What the result will be of such an interesting trial to the general public in that region of course furnishes food for gossip and speculation.

A JEALOUS WOMAN

Tried for Murdering Her Husband and Acquitted—The Audience in Court Applaud the Verdict.

Alexandre Dumas' text "kill her," with only a variation of gender—kill him—has just been acted upon by a young married lady of good family in Corsica. The assize court of Bastia, on August 8th, tried Madame Lucia Medelli, aged twenty-one, for the murder of her husband. The prisoner, a very handsome woman, was married in 1869, to M. Carlo Benevente. There was no great disparity of age, he being only twenty five when she was eighteen. They had but a small fortune, they set up housekeeping in a country-house at Castlemare, on the high road from Ajaccio to Corte. A child, a little girl, was born in the first year of the marriage. In 1871 the wife suspected that her husband had fallen in love with the nursemaid of this child, a girl named Maria Fanti. She charged her husband with infidelity, and insisted upon the girl being sent away. M. Benevente refused to part with her, and this strengthened the suspicions of the wife. Bickerings went on for some months. Lucia got another nursemaid for her child, but Maria Fanti, though having nothing to do, still remained in the house by the will of her husband.

A month before the murder, Lucia purchased at Ajaccio, from several chemists, a quantity of arsenic, with a view, as the prosecution alleged, of poisoning her husband, or, as Lucia herself declared, committing suicide. However this may be, the arsenic was never used; but on March 8th, after she had wished her husband good night, she went to her own separate chamber and feigned to be asleep. Presently she heard the steps of her husband on the staircase leading to the room of Maria Fanti. She had previously procured a second key to this room.

Taking from her husband's study a six-barreled revolver which she knew to be loaded, she stealthily went to the door of Maria Fanti's chamber, and remained for a long while listening outside. At length she opened the door, entered with a taper in one hand and the revolver in the other, and seeing her husband fast asleep by Maria Fanti's side, she fired. Miss Lucia took deliberate aim at his head and another at his breast. The second ball pierced his lungs, and he died instantly. It does not appear that she attempted to injure the girl.

On this state of facts, after a pro forma speech for the prosecution by Advocate-General Rossi, M. Fernia, counsel for the defence, submitted to the jury that, if a man had been in the place of the wife, Lucia, he would certainly have been acquitted on the ground of having "avenging his honor." But had not a woman an equal right to avenge her honor? A more flagrant case of intolerable provocation was never heard of. In the name of equal justice to both sexes he demanded an acquittal. The jury at once returned a verdict of not guilty. The president ordered the immediate release of Lucia Medelli, and on leaving the dock she threw herself into her mother's arms, which were open to receive her.

WOMEN'S MEN ANALYZED.

We should think the Ann Elizas & Co., of the female brigade would pretty generally dissent from the opinions expressed by an analyzer in a late issue of the Saturday Review, of their preferences for and conduct towards husbands, who exhibit masculine tastes in their choice of pastimes. We here quote some of his pungent if not polite hints:—

Nothing surprises men more than the odd ignorance of women concerning them, and half the unhappiness of married life springs from that ignorance. They cannot be made to understand the difference between a man's nature and requirements and their own, and they condemn all that they cannot understand. In those few rational homes where men's sports and gatherings, undisturbed by the presence of petticoats, are not made occasions for suspicion or inconvenience, there is more peace and happiness with which married life began is more like the widow's curse than elsewhere; but, unfortunately for both hust ands and wives, these homes are rare, while those are common where a cause of bitterness in the evening is occasioned for the morning, and deadly offense is taken at club dinners or a week's shooting, the consequence of which is deceit or dissension, and sometimes both.

The woman's ideal man has none of these erratic tendencies. His business done, he comes home with the docility of a well bred pointer sent to heel, and finds energy enough after his hard day's work for a variety of petites soins which make him more precious in her eyes than all the tact, the temper, the judgment, the uprightness he has manifested in his dealings with the outside world. And the domesticity which she claims from her husband she demands from her son. Latch keys are her abomination, and the "gas left burning" is a beacon light on the way of destruction. She has the profoundest contempt for men whom her boy calls his friends. She never knows into what mischief they may lead him, but she is sure it is mischief if they keep him away from his home in the evening. She would prescribe the same social restraints and moral regimen for her son as for her daughter, and she thinks the exercise of the masculine nature require no wider field and no looser rein. But though she likes those tame and tender men whom she can tie up close to her apron strings and lovingly imprison in the narrow domain of home, she succumbs without a struggle to the square-jawed brute of the Rochester type, the man who dominates her by the mere force of superior strength, and she is not too severe on Don Juan if only she can flatter herself that she is the best loved and the last. That these are the men most liked by women is shown both by their own public and by daily observation; and it seems to us that among the many subjects for extended study of late proposed for women, a better acquaintance with men's minds, a higher regard for the nobler kind of man, and the ability to accept love as only one of many qualities and not always the strongest or the most praiseworthy of his impulses, would not be out of place.

SAD END OF A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN.

Early in 1862 Maud Virginia Carleton, then only twelve years of age, was sent by her parents from New Orleans to St. Xavier Academy, Chicago, to be educated. The war soon after commenced, and during its continuance both of her parents died. In the meantime she had become a beautiful woman, at seventeen years of age was the acknowledged belle of the institution, and her character and education were such as to class her as a perfect lady. In 1869, at the age of nineteen, she married a German Jew named Frederick W. Mueldener. We are the honeymoon had barely passed they allowed their mutual ardent love to cool, differences and quarrels ensued, and he eventually committed suicide. She was left with plenty of means, however, and about two years since she came to New York and led a gay and merry life for a time. Her beauty, flashing diamonds and reputed wealth soon brought her hosts of friends, among them one gentleman, Thomas P. Wight, a clerk in a Broad street firm. Wight, who seemed to have had some slight knowledge of her previously, paid her marked attention, accompanied her to the theatre and took her out for drives in the Park. The result of the affair with Wight was an unlawful connection, and the pair took rooms on East Eleventh street, and, it is reported, lived together as man and wife. Some three months ago, however, she failed in health, which finally resulted in pulmonary consumption, from which she died on the morning of Saturday, the 31st ult., at Bayonne, N. J., where she had recently taken up her residence. She wore on her fingers at the time of her death a diamond ring, says the N. Y. Herald, valued at $1,000, and a costly pearl ring. When Wight returned from the city he took the rings from her finger, and telling the servant he was going to New York to make arrangements for the funeral, and that he would be back in the evening, he left. He did not return that night or the day following, Sunday, and the body lay in the cottage, rapidly decomposing. On Monday morning the chief of police, Mr. Whitney, was notified, and he at once went to the cottage and took possession. While he was there, Wight was seen returning, and the officer concealed himself in an inner room to learn what he had to say. He talked roughly to the little servant girl, and said he was going to have a pine box made to take away the body. On being confronted by the officer and asked what he had done with the rings, he became confused and said he had got drunk, and that they had been stolen from him. Mr. Whitney is, however, of opinion that they had been pawned by him in New York. He went to Jersey City and procured a coffin, a carriage and a hearse, and in the evening the body of the once beautiful and accomplished Maud Carleton was borne to its last resting place. Incidentally, after the funeral, Wight left, and has not since been heard of, and the police remain in possession of the cottage. Inquiries have been set on foot to ascertain whether any of her relations live, and the authorities are on the look out for some charge on which they may arrest Wight, against whom, however, it is but fair to say there is no evidence, so far as foul play is concerned.

A YOUNG GIRL SAVED FROM MARRYING A SWINDLER.—On the morning of Sept. 26th, a beautiful girl, named Rosalie Mayor, whose guardian is a wealthy merchant of Broadway, is reported as having visited the Police Central office, this city, seeking an interview with George Strauss, who was arrested the previous evening for swindling, and to whom she said she was betrothed. Her request was granted, and as she entered his cell, Strauss shrank back when she said:—"You have been paying me attentions for over a year, and thveigled me into an engagement, but, thank God, I found you out ere it was too late. You are a swindler and a villain, and I never want to see you again. Here, take back your ring," extending an engagement ring, richly set with diamonds. Strauss turned away, but the girl dashed the ring at his feet and went from the cell weeping. On an enamelled card which was handed to the Sun reporter was engraved, "Rosalie Mayor, 244 East Fifty-fifth street." She said that about twelve months ago she became acquainted with Strauss, who professed to be very wealthy. He frequently visited her and escorted her to the gardens in the neighborhood. She noticed that he was recognized many times by men who have proved to be Levine, Trueheart and Isaac Lindheim, whom the detectives arrested that morning in Grand street, where he had an appointment to meet Strauss.

A DISAPPOINTED LOVER COMMITS SUICIDE.—Henry Bremer, a jeweler, shot himself through the head, in the reading room of the Young Men's Christian Association, in Newark, N. J., on Sept. 26th. Portions of the skull and brain were carried to distant parts of the room. He was nearly fifty years of age, and had been a regular visitor at the rooms of the association for three years. Disappointment in love is said to have caused his temporary derangement.

RAKING A REVEREND'S PILE.

How Canada Bill Plays His Little Game on the Clergy.

A correspondent of the Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise, who recently went overland from the east, thus relates how a clergyman on the train was inveigled into betting on three card monte, and lost all the money he had with him:—

Upon arriving at Omaha a delay of two hours enables passengers to get their baggage re-checked, to secure sleeping car, etc. The train had left the depot, and the conductor, A. L. Norton, started to go through the train to collect tickets. When a new emigrant, or second class car, he saw a man well known all over Nebraska, who goes by the sobriquet of "Canada Bill," and who, for two or three years past, has traveled for that outlandish, pie, childlike, and easily learned (alas! how difficult to fight) game, known as "three card monte." Now, the laws of Nebraska are an anomaly, for, while gambling is only punished by the soft fine of $10, it costs a "horse opera" manager $300 "cold," to open his "show," and any lecturer on any subject which calls for greenbacks at the door of the hall is forced to contribute $30 to the town or city wherein said lecturer holds forth. In other words, Nebraska is the pet paradise of the "sports," and Canada Bill, none is more keen and successful. For a long time "Bill" has made the "travel" on the road west his especial study, and has gathered much profit from "that little game" he plays so well. Superintendent Sickles, who is a most careful and efficient disciplinarian, has taken every means in his power to prevent "Bill" from plundering passengers over the railroad, and has caused notices to be posted in every car, forbidding all gambling on the train, and has instructed any conductor on the train not to permit it, but, notwithstanding all his care, "Canada Bill" daily manages to "catch" some ignorant and verdant fool in his toils, but, somehow, the latter fame are clergymen, and are always "goes for" one of the "cloth" with more faith and courage than with any other class. Mr. Sickles has remonstrated, pleaded, threatened and watched, but all to no account. "Bill" finds daily a new fool, and not long ago, during one of the superintendent's "laborings," "Bill" said:—"Mr. Sickles, I will now make this agreement; I will go over your road as often as suits my convenience, pay double fare, and pay the company you represent $3,000 yearly, in advance, for the unmolested privilege of playing my "little game" with clergymen only, and will give a bond to fulfil my agreement in ten times that sum."

But to my story, as it will illustrate a moral:—That morning Conductor Norton had a long train to go through, and, of course, could not stop to watch "Bill," who, with three confederates, "opened as soon as Norton left the first car, and before he returned the "boys" had relieved "Uncle Sam" of $500 and got off at the first station west. As, most unfortunately, is usual, the victim was a clergyman, who, with a wife and four children, were en route to California, to establish himself and preach the gospel. The same conductor, a week and a half after, found the poor chap betting he could "tell the card" and losing a few dollars, and at last putting a gold watch in pawn for $30, which he also lost. The Reverend Mr. —— withheld his name, at the earnest entreaty of his family, as he is now in California, and has promised to stop gambling; in the meanwhile had been exhorting "Bill" and the nice, innocent young man on the wickedness of gambling. As the two walk keep up in last outing, he turned to the Rev. Mr. F——, and with tears rolling down his cheeks, cried that "the watch had been the death-bed gift of his mother, and that if he could only borrow the money to redeem it he would never gamble more, and would repay the loan as soon as he arrived in Sacramento, where he had an aunt living." The Rev. Mr. F—— drew forth a well filled purse and handed the young man $30, who took it, and, in words almost choked with emotion, declared he "would never forget this kind act;" he turned to redeem his watch, but "Bill" just at that moment turned over the queen of hearts, and, touching it again, there was a "bloody" spot on the corner, clearly and positively betraying that "Bill" had made a mistake in allowing a "spot" card to appear. Quick as thought the "young and innocent youth" pointed it out to the Rev. Mr. F—— who "Bill" knew from good cuts should be plain enough), and whispering it was a "sure thing" if he could get $20 more he could not only get back the watch, which his "aged mother had given him," but all the money he had lost. Our ministerial friend "saw it" at once, and, telling the youth he must bet no more, gave him $50 more, which was put up, that he could tell the right card. In great haste the youth took up the card next to the one with the "spot" on it, and, with tears in his eyes, and the money was lost to "Bill." The clergyman was very much excited and angry at the young man for selecting the wrong card, for there, still before them, lay the marked card, which "Bill" again took care should be seen was the queen of hearts. The young man was in tears, and the clergyman gave him another $100 to get back the lost money. There was the marked card—it was certain! "Bill" slowly covered the stakes, the "innocent youth" put forth his hand to double the bet, but when, sacre! two cards had black spots just alike, and after a hurried discussion with the clergyman a card was selected—it was not the queen of hearts, and the youth and parson were loosed again. At this stage of the game the children of the Rev. Mr. F—— clung to him with sobs, and begged he would not "bet with those wicked men," but he forgot all his profession, his family, his prudence and his scruples. A hundred dollars changed hands, and "Bill" managed to "crimp" the corner of the queen of hearts while "Bill's" head was turned. The parson saw it, took the thing in his own hands, betted $100 he had left $240, and again he failed to find the queen of hearts, and lost his money.

The train was now close at Papillion Station, the conductor at hand and the parson "dead broke;" the "innocent youth," in despair, said he would go to the next car and "try his luck" once. Bill "rayther calculated" he "had done a right smart chance on that day, and would go back and see his old woman and kids." The Rev. Mr. F—— was so overwhelmed with his loss and the jests of lookers-on that he was like one in a trance. The train stopped a moment, went on again, and from the window your correspondent saw Bill and that "innocent boy who put his dead mother's watch in pawn" go into the station arm in arm.

The whole scene had not lasted more than ten minutes, and was as clever a swindle as was ever perpetrated, and one which Bill is repeating every day. The Rev. Mr. F—— applied to Conductor Norton, who assured him that there was no redress except to return to Omaha and cause Bill to be arrested, who would go before the police magistrate, plead guilty, pay his fine of $10 and walk off. And so it was. The victim got but little pity on that train, on account of his profession, although it is beyond question that in the commencement his charity for that "innocent young man" led him astray.

A PUGILISTIC PARSON.

Of the Rev. Peter Cartwright, who died at Pleasant Plains, Ill., on Sept. 25th, the following anecdotes are told:—"When he called with renewed hope when they learn that young Cartwright, according to his own story, was a wild, reckless boy, and delighted in horse racing, card playing and dancing, and went into young company. Though not initiated into the tricks of vulgar gamblers, he was very successful in winning money. Peter's evil outfits will hardly be wondered at, when it is remembered that his teacher was a fugitive murderer from Georgia, who had killed the sheriff when the latter attempted to arrest him for crime.

"Peter was converted in 1801. The change was very sudden. He had been to a wedding about five miles from home and danced until a late hour. Soon after his return home, while he was pacing the floor, reflecting on the manner in which he had spent the day and evening, all of a sudden blood rushed to his head, his heart palpitated, and in a few minutes he turned blind. He imagined himself about to die, cried for mercy, and promised to serve the Lord, if spared. After recovering from the attack he sold his race horse, burned his pack of cards and took to reading the Testament. One day, while in anguish over his sinful past, it appeared to him that he heard a voice from heaven, saying, 'Peter, look at me!' His sins, however, were not forgiven until some time after, when he received a heavenly intimation to that effect. The following was related by the Rev. Cartwright:—

"At one of my appointments, in 1804, there were two very finely dressed, fashionable young ladies, attended by two brothers with loaded horse-whips. The house was crowded, and the young ladies took seats near where I stood. I was unwell, and had a vial of peppermint in my pocket. Before I commenced preaching I took out my vial and swallowed a little of the peppermint. The congregation was melted into tears and both the young ladies took the lerks. A man warned me, as I dismissed the assembly, that the brothers had sworn they would horse-whip me for giving their sisters the lerks. I went out to the young men and expostulated. One said he had seen me take out a vial, in which I thought some whisky was concealed, and that I was quick as thought, it came into my mind how to get clear of my whipping, and pulling the vial out, I cried:—'Yes, if I gave your sister the jerks, I'll give them to you!' I moved toward him. He backed. I advanced, and he wheeled and run, warning me not to come near him, or he would kill me. It raised the laugh on him, and I escaped a whipping."

"The jerks appear to have proved fatal in some instances, and Cartwright tells of a drunken rowdy who was seized with them, and swore he would drink the d—d jerks to death. His bottle came in contact with a sapling and was broken. The rowdy pitched a violent jerk, snapped his neck, and expired.

"While on the Hockhocking Circuit, Cartwright was disturbed one Sunday morning, at camp-meeting, by the advent of a gang of roughs. When he was about half through his discourse, two young men entered, finely dressed, with loaded whips, and began to laugh and talk to the women. Cartwright ordered them to desist, and called for a magistrate. The officers of the law were afraid to interfere, and Cartwright advanced on the ruffians. What followed is related in his own words:—

"One of them made a pass at my head with his whip, but I closed in with him, and held his right arm fast. I threw him down, and held him fast. He tried his best to get loose. I told him to be quiet, or I would pound his chest well. The mob rushed in to the rescue of the prisoner, and a drunken magistrate ordered me to release him. I refused, and he swore he would knock me down. I told him to knock away. A friend, at my request, relieved me of my prisoner. The drunken justice made a pass at me. I parried the stroke, seized him by the collar, brought him to the ground and jumped on him. I told him to be quiet or I would pound him well. The mob rushed up and knocked down several preachers. I gave my prisoner to another, and the ringleader and I met. He made three passes at me, and I gave him a blow in the ear, and dropped him to the earth.

The struggle resulted in a victory for the Methodists, and the fines and costs collected from the captured rowdies amounted to nearly $300.

It is proper for us to add that notwithstanding his rough and ready manner, attributable to his early frontier life, he was much esteemed, and his career as a reverend met with general approval.

BRUDDER BONES ON DE RAGING CANAWL.

BONES.—I nebber tole you what I know about nabbigation, did I?

INT.—I was not aware that you had been to sea, sir.

BONES.—Yes—it's so; went to see my country relations once. It was in a canal boat. Got overtook by a storm. Come near losin my life by it, too.

INT.—Tell us how it all came about.

BONES.—Well, you see, we left for Elmira in a boat dat was pooty nearly played out. We hadn't been out many hours fore she gan to take water. Presently we hear de cappen swearin bekase dar wasn't no wind, but just den we took a raft of Dutch and French aboard, and dey began to raise a breeze soon as dey come on. And hey! stoppin' place a woman wid a baby came aboard and ax' for a berf; "H—ll!" says de cappen, "dis aint a lyin' in hospital!" But he put her in de forehaw, and directly dere was a squalin' breeze, which increased to a squall; and den dere was a hull—de woman lullin' her baby to sleep, you know. Den we shipt more passengers, and den de wind rose up in earnest and we slept a yaw; and de first officer he come out ob de cabin wid his gun. "What you goin to shoot?" I ax; for I couldn't see no game. "Gosh! to shoot de bridge," says he, wid a grin; and just den we shot roo saudder bridge, and dat explained it. Bime-by de wind rose up again and it gin to pour in torrents, while de waves run mountains high, and de lightnin' lighened an' de thunder thundered, and de Dutch stop quarrelin' wid de French and all got sick. Presently I hear de cappen yell out, "Take a reef in dat larboard hose clar and throw de cook overboard, for he's drunk. Get de kinks out ob de low line. Put everybody 'cept me on half rations. Port, hard-a-port, I say, or you'll swamp us!"

INT.—A very shallow observation, it strikes me, sir.

BONES.—It was de water dat was shallow; not de observation. Den dey commenced handin' out de rations—a plug o' tobacker apiece and a glass of port wine wid a biscuit; and if dere's any harder port dan dat in New York, I'd like to see it. Presently dere came a great puff o' wind and de vessel carom'd over to leeward.

INT.—Careened—careened, sir.

BONES.—Any way she went ober onto her beam ends, and as de passengers was all runnin' about wid de pigs an' chickens, makin' such a hullab uloo, and de boat was rollin' and de lightnin' lightnin' an' de funder funderin', an' de ole boat founderin', and de rest of us floundrin' in de water, de cappen and me come up to de surfs widin a yard ob each oder. "Hullo, cappen," says I, squirtin' out de water, but he dove down agin and I seen no more ob him. Jus' den de steward's pig come sailin' along a tukin', and I got a hold ob his tail and swum ashore wid two oder Dutchmen, and dat's de whole ob it.

INT.—And that's enough of it. We'll now hear—

Down in the Valley.

Down in the valley where lost friends are sleeping,
O'ershadowed by branches of willow and yew,
Deaf to the voices of those that are weeping,
Silent and lone rest the tried and the true.
Chorus.—Soft soothing winds
To the leaflets are whisp'ring,
Like tears of angels
Descends the bright dew.

Lowly the mounds where our loved are reposing,
Under no pillar or proud sculptured fane;
Only the blue heaven's bright canopy o'er them,
Where rest the forms we've so tenderly lain.
Chorus.—Soft soothing winds, etc.

Golden haired Jessie, the youngest and dearest,
Sleeps by our Willie, the joy of our heart,
Else, the arm-eyed, the gentlest and fairest,
With little Lulu apart lying apart.
Chorus.—Soft soothing winds, etc.

O'er the plain tablet bend low, ye willows,
Where our hair rest in honored repose;
Daily the breeze shall bring balm to their pillows,
Murm'ring a dirge to the stream as it flows.
Chorus.—Soft soothing winds, etc.

THEATRICALS IN WASHINGTON, D. C., IN 1818.

The programme presented below is of a performance given at the Washington, D. C., Theatre, in the summer of 1818, when a season of twenty nights was inaugurated. Many of the names will be recognized by the few old stagers of the present time who are still left to fret their remaining days upon the stage of life. Nearly all, if not all, who took part in that performance, have passed away to the silent land.

GIBBLE! GIBBLE! GABBLE! GABBLE!
End Song.

COMPOSED BY A. J. G., CINCINNATI.

Air. "CACKLE! CACKLE!"

My name is Josie Rod Hot, and my wife she claims the same;
It makes an difference to me which you call me by the name,
I'd stake my old grey under-shirt; if it wasn't for her sex, sure,
I'd tap her knowledge box some day, and end her curtain lecture.
Chorus.

It's gibble! gibble! gabble! gabble! from morning until eve:
I'll pack up all my duds, my friends, and then I'll take my leave.

When'er I'm absent from the house there's sure to be a row;
She has revenge upon the cats, you may judge from their me-ow.
I utter by the hallway, and then I reach me destination,
I sit me down and give all ear to a qualified oration.
Chorus.—It's gibble! gibble! gabble! gabble, etc.

I'm wakened from my slumber, in a manner most shocking,
Her's over me a pouring out a watering-pot and mocking;
She gives it with a will, my boys, and affirms it with her volley!
I draw the clothes up o'er my head, and chuckle out ha! ha!
Chorus.—It's gibble! gibble! gabble! gabble, etc.

Spanish Scene of the Tranca, by Mr. Garvey.

The Courier of Saint Petersburg, by Mr. Johnson.

Mr. H. Ruggles on the Flying Cord, as performed by him 100 nights in New York with great success.

Carpet Leaps and Egyptian Pyramids, by the Company.

Messrs. Howard, Garvey, Sweet, Johnson, Ripley, Ruggles, Perry, Sands, and the clown, Mr. Sprague.

Plate Spinning and Balancing, by Master Perry.

Tight Rope, by Mr. Sweet.

The Domestic Mare, Ophelia, will be introduced by Mr. Howard, and perform a variety of Feats. She will eat at a Table and Eat with the Clown; likewise, will jump through a Balloon on Fire; then will be shot with a pistol and dragged out of the Ring by another Horse.

Metamorphose of the Sack, or the Clown deceived by a Lady.

To conclude with a Comic Dance by the Clown.

The whole performance will conclude with a great three horse act by Mr. Johnson, entitled "The Flight of Napoleon Bonaparte from Moscow," changing to the laughable afterpiece of "The Miller and the Coalman." Miller, Mr. W. Johnson; Coalman, Mr. Ripley.

Master of Ring, Mr. Howard; Clown, Mr. Sprague.

* Walter Howard died in Sydney, Australia, a few years ago.

BABY'S GRAVE.

BY FRANK C. FILLEY.

See the fading sunbeams quiver, as the sun sinks down the west,
Where the dying sunlight lingers, there the willow branches lave.
Purling, as with angel's fingers, to our little darling's grave.
Chorus.—Sleep my little blue eyed treasure,
Believed Baby, sleep in peace.

In the distant, flowery meadow, chirps the cricket, sharp and shrill,
While among the gathering shadows sings the lonely whippoor-will.
Little birds their mates are calling homeward, o'er the rippling wave.
Evening dews like tears are falling on our little darling's grave.
Chorus.—Sleep my little blue eyed treasure, &c.

NEGRO MINSTRELSY IN 1850.

To Messrs. Turner and Lester, double song and dance men, we tender our thanks for the following bill which follows. Mr. Smith was not a professional, but he thought that there was money in the business, and he organized a really first class troupe, as the manager pocketed nearly eight salaries, and giving a most excellent entertainment. The speculation was a failure, however, and Mr. Smith retired in disgust. G. W. Moore is now one of the proprietors of the Christy Minstrels, St. James Hall, London, which troupe he has been connected for several years:—

SNIFFIN'S CAMPBELL MINSTRELS,
441 BROADWAY.
MONDAY EVENING, JAN. 20, 1850.
UNPRECEDENTED ATTRACTION.

The management takes great pleasure in announcing the engagement of the renowned

BILLY BIRCH,

the best "Brudder Bones," save George Christy, in the world. Mr. Birch, with his wife and child, were among the ill-fated Central America when she was lost at sea. The beautiful incident:—Mrs. Birch's preservation of her pet bird—will be remembered by all our readers. Billy will make his bow to-night.

The unrivalled "Brudder Bones" and versatile performer, and only true living representative of a southern darkey.

On the same occasion, E. Bowers, the best Shakespearean darkey on the stage, will appear more before the many friends in New York. The bill for this week cannot be excelled, if it can be equalled, on this side of the Great Salt Pond.

JOHN GOLDEN, the Champion Clog Dancer.

MASTER CHARLES, the Champion Fancy Dancer, in connection with A. M. HERNANDEZ, the great Pantomimic and General Performer.

R. ABBECCH, the Distinguished Clog Dancer and Harpist.

MR. J. A. HERMAN, the Golden-Mouthed Ballad Singer.

B. A. COTTON, the only "Bob Ridley" and "Essence of Ole Virginny" living.

G. W. MOORE, the funny "Brudder Stephen," and Tamborinist.

MR. J. B. DONNIKER, the well known distinguished Musical Director and Violinist, Melophonist and Cornet Player, with a host of others, making, altogether, the largest amount of talent ever concentrated in this city.

Those who wish to get their money's worth, including a hearty laugh must go to Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Sept. 30, 1872.

The new comers, the musical celebrities from the other side of the Atlantic ferry, are gradually wheeling into line, and making themselves heard in a most unmistakable manner. First came Strakosch's "Old Folks" Concert Troupe, with Mario, Ronconi, and the other Patti in the leading roles. Then followed Rubenstein, who tears passion into tatters on the pianoforte; with Wieniawski, and other coadjutors. And this week we are to have Mrs. Lucca, who, from having her mouth open so much, seems to have been caught with a hook and line, baited with golden flies, and worms, and such like. These dear people are all in the musical line, who have their crotchets and eccentricities, and who, while harmonious before the public, and evidently living like Barnum's happy family, fight like professional bull dogs when the eye of the people is not upon them. Then we have our dramatic new comers, Mr. and Mrs. Bouclcault, who made their entree on Monday evening last, receiving such a welcome as Horace Greeley might be proud of in his halcyonest days. Genie Agnes Robertson, with her sweet face, and silvery voice, and ——— this is going a little too far with another man's wife, so we'll stop where we are.....The equinoctial wasn't any great shakes in this direction, supposing we have had it, and "Old Probabilities" is deserving of renewed assurances of our high regard for his successful efforts in staving off this unwelcome visitor. If it is to come yet, what we have said goes for nothing, and the probable man will receive our heartfelt execration—such is our gratitude....."A young man who has not had much experience in such things," wishes us to inform him "how and where to get 'Under the Gaslight.'" We don't see anything very difficult in this. There is a public light before our door, and the young man has our permission to get "Under the Gaslight" there as often as he wants to. We never, like some people we know of, hide our light under a bushel. .....In the Western country they are improving the matinee business, for, if Ohio papers are to be credited with partiality for the merest atom of truth, it would appear that a married lady lately held a "riding whip matinee" with the county recorder. A "manage act," we presume. We should be highly pleased to record a full report of the performance, but silence, they say, is charity; so for once in our lives we shall strive to be charitable; but it must have been heavy on the lying villain who assailed a weak woman with his poisonous tongue, and so forth.....We are not surprised at anything Boston may do after losing two hundred thousand dollars on that "great musical success of the season," the jubilee; but we do think that some regard at least should be had for the future peace of her own people. But they seem to be callous to every humane feeling down there; for, on the door of a house in Boston is a sign bearing this sad legend:—"Music lessons, piano and base viol, from eight in the morning till eight in the evening." We have no objection to this, for it is the pursuit of a legitimate profession; but mark you the devilish malice and wickedness of this musical fiend, for immediately beneath that legend appears this infamous and soul-harrowing line:—"Furnished apartments to let." Can human depravity go further than this, even in Boston?.....Manager Daly, Saratoga, and "Evangeline" experience has benefited him, judging from his great show of "Diamonds."..... A well-meaning but rather impossible critic, in reviewing Mario's resurrection, makes use of the following nice talk in speaking of the tenor's voice:—"It is no longer in sunshine condition—there are shadows here and there that tell of evening." Isn't it pretty? You can find lots more of it in books of rhetoric, the "Pirates Own Book," etc.....When we hear of actors becoming "indisposed," and playing old soldier, and getting locked up in the station house, just to enable them to shirk their duty, we cannot help thinking of that other public orator, John Wesley, Esq., who is credited with having preached forty-two thousand sermons, and never had a year's leave of absence with expenses paid, nor even an attack of clergyman's sore throat. Neither in all his extended ministerial labors was John incarcerated a single night in the Tombs. This is something to be proud of, and our professional friends—whose "days of absence" are like leaves in Vallambrosa—would do well to profit by the example of this good man; but it is just as natural for public performers to get "indisposed," as it is for street car conductors to maul with their dirty hands every pretty girl who enters their cars.....But youth must be served; when these histrionics get to be as old as John Wesley, they will know better, so, as the old song so pathetically recommends:—

GO IT WHILE YOU'RE YOUNG.

Of all the songs we've ever heard the dashing blades among,
Is that old, familiar ballad of "Go it while you're young."
A motto that folks recommend to our nymphs of song and dance,
Who need so little extra force their charms for to enhance;
There's Pastor's Jennie Engel with your hearts the deuce to pay,
And Josh Hart's bithesome Jenny Hughes and charming Ada Gray.

Then tune your fifes and fiddles up, the big bassoon be strung,
And let the jovial chorus be, "Go it while you're young."

.....When Horace Greeley and his traveling troupe arrived at Hobart on Saturday last, on their return from a successful tour through Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, who should be there to extend the right hand of fellowship to the coming man but several showmen, and what do you think these beings were after? Why, they wanted to engage Horace as "blower" for their side shows; and when the woodpecker chided them, and gently but forcibly remonstrated with them for penning up living animals in iron-bound cages, these miserable wretches gave three cheers for Grant and Gratz Brown, which only goes to show their ignorance of the rudest rudiments of political life.....A Minnesota county fair, having tired its supporters with virtuous "trials of speed," and charitable base ball matches, now offers premiums for the three heaviest women. We caution the heavy women of our theatres not to enter for these alleged premiums, as the scheme is nothing but a delusion and a snare. Minnesota is young, but she's awful tricky.....They are going to produce the "Africaine" in white, at the Academy, to-morrow evening. This will be as great a curiosity as the white man who turned black a year or two ago....New productions of the Sardou, Daly and Bronson stripe, are now called society plays, but what kind of society is not stated. Judging from the complexion of their audiences, it might be called mixed society..... Somebody is advertising Ole Bull violin strings for sale. Generally, fiddle strings are made of cat gut, but doubtless these bull strings are tougher, coming, doubtless, from the old bulls served up as roast beef and steaks at our first class restaurants. This isn't much of a joke, but you may probably be able to digest it.....Dominick Murray, "Escaped from Sing Sing," will be the attraction at Wood's Museum, this week. Let us all be present to congratulate Dominick on his "Escape."..... An uneducated mule, who has been studying out the theatrical posters on our dead walls and places, asks us "why hundreds of people are turned away every night from some of the theatres and what have they been doing?" and wishes to know further, "whether the other places take them in." No wonder editors are driven to do fearful deeds, and confine people in mad houses.....There is evidently a quarrel brewing between Kentucky and Missouri concerning things about which neither of them know much. A Kentucky paper says that "if art continues to make the same progress in St. Louis that it has for some years past, all the cows in heaven will eventually be painted there." Is this intended as a reflection on the stage and its artists? Kentucky has need to be careful how she slanders a noble profession.....A strange man, a singing vocalist, in a convivial state of unsobriety, entered the old Bowery Theatre the other evening, and asked to see the manager. That gentleman being pointed out, the stranger approached him, and, in the words of one of brother Watts' productions, sang—"Freligh, drink, and quench your thirst." Freligh, who had never studied Watts, quenched his thirst at the vocalist's expense. For fear the reader may believe this to be true, we hasten to undeceive him, by saying that it is a made up thing.....'Our Jim," who will never be any smarter than he now, says that it's a very curious thing for such a theatre as Wallack's to engage in, and he can't understand it, for, says he, they are going to produce to-morrow evening a combination of menagerie and domestic drama. "You're mistaken, James; Mr. Wallack has no menagerie, and never permits anything of the kind to be exhibited at his theatre." "Time no slouch," replied the offended youth, "and kno of whom ime redin. I go be the bil of the pis, wich nes: 'Pig-male-tion, and Gal-at-Tea,' and if that thare haint menadgary and domestik drammer, ide like tu no wat yu call it." The bright youth had worked out this silly stuff from "Pygmalion and Galatea," the new comedy announced at Wallack's.....and speaking of Wallack's re-opening for the regular season, we perceive that a new Bonifica has been engaged, likewise a well known Baker and Butler; and besides this, a beautiful Challis will be presented to each patron.

City Summary.

THE BURLESQUE of "Chow Chow" continued the attraction at Wood's Museum at the evening performances and Saturday matinee, and the comedy of "She Stoops to Conquer" was presented at the usual matinees. In the latter Mr. T. B. Mills made his first appearance, acting the character of Mr. Hardcastle. This evening, Sept. 30th, Dominick Murray commences an engagement, when the sensational drama entitled "Escaped from Sing Sing" will be revived, and at the matinee performances the burlesque of "Chow Chow" will be given.

THERE WERE NO FRESH appearances at the Theatre Comique since our last, but among the novelties presented we may mention the performance of the wonderful African Dwarf, "Tommy" by John Hart, which completely deceived a majority of the audience until the trick was exposed upon the stage. A quartet of vocalists in grotesque costumes called "The Dit-a-mus Family" created much laughter by their burlesque singing. Frank Kerns, William West, John Wild and John Queen were the performers, and they were thrice recalled. A sketch called "Uncle Sph-nx, or, Those Old Pliantoms," afforded an Ethiopian element of the company a chance to display their talent, and a new comic dramatic sketch called "Cash: or, The Way of the World," by John F. Poole, wound up the performances. Miss Annie Adams, who continued during the week, won much favor in her serio comic songs. Jennie and Baby Benson, Kitty O'Neil, Jennie Hughes, and Ada Wray appeared in their specialties.

THERE WAS A GOOD ATTENDANCE the past week at White's Athenæum. In the first part "The Chough and the Crow," from "Guy Mannering," was finely rendered by the double quartet. Carl Rudolph sang with much effect "Happy be thy Dreams." James H. Budworth won favor by his singing of "All Nations." C. Nichols' pleasing voice was heard to advantage in "Don't be Angry with me, Darling." Luke Schoolcraft gave with comical effect "Susan Jane," and Charley Henry's singing of "Annie Lysle merits praise. The olio was made up of familiar acts, among which were chiefly noticeable McKee and Rogers' song and dance called "The Octoroon;" Charles White's natural acting as Jasper Doolittle in "A new Dodge to Raise Money;" and J. H. Budworth's performance of the Dutchman in the closing sketch of "The Dutch Traveler." Both tank and Bartholomew closed their engagement somewhat unexpectedly on the 21st. To night, Sept. 30th, Cartright and Gilbert, song and dance performers, are to appear.

JAMES ROBINSON'S CIRCUS COMPANY closed a successful season of three weeks with the performances of Saturday evening, Sept. 28th. Located in the most aristocratic portion of the city, the canvas has been well filled by the families of our best citizens, and the performances have been of a high order of merit. The "bareback" and hurdle riding of James Robinson, as well as the graceful pad riding of Frank Pastor, have at every performance elicited the highest encomiums. Master Clarence Robinson evinces great skill for his age. The exhibition is in every respect worthy of liberal patronage.

"LE ROI CAROTTE" is the standard dish served up at the Grand Opera House. The average attendance since our last report has been good.

LITTLE GEORGIA, infantile acrobat, and Ed. Banker, in his "magic changes," were the fresh attractions of the week just closed at Tony Pastor's. The former, announced as a pupil of Prof. R. Risley, who was the first to introduce that style of performance to the public, is a beautiful child of tender years, who was placed in the most difficult positions, and as a consequence was not announced. The child is graceful, and has evidently been well trained, as its performances would do credit to a much older person. Ed. Banker's changes of costume were accomplished without leaving the stage, and with celerity, while the songs appropriate to each character sung by him were favorably received. Harrigan and Hart, who may be classed among the best double character song and dance performers, also appeared in original acts, written by Mr. Edward Harrigan, entitled "After the War" and "The Day We Went West." In the former Mr. Harrigan impersonated an aged Ethiopian, and Tommy Hart, his young son, both of which were excellently acted. In the latter, the troubles of emigrants seeking our western frontier were humorously portrayed in song. Mr. Hart had a good opportunity to display his wonderful simulation of feminine idiosyncracies, and Harrigan was as much at home comically as an Irish immigrant. Gus Williams, in Dutch character songs, written and composed by himself, met with much favor. He is not only an excellent performer but a good composer; possesses a keen perception of wit and humor, and a certain magnetism which quickly communicates it to the audience. Kitty Le Roy's jig dancing, Jennie Engel's pleasing vocalism and graceful impersonation, all merit praise. As for the genial Tony Pastor, he is very fortunate if, any evening, he can escape being re-called a half a dozen times to sing those songs which have made him so popular with the audiences. Some three sketches introduced the balance of the company under favorable auspices.

MLLE. ZOE commenced an engagement at the Bowery Theatre on Monday evening, Sept. 23d, in "The French Spy," when she was welcomed by a large and enthusiastic audience, and the business continued good all the week. She possesses an expressive face, good figure, was tastefully costumed and her pantomime was graceful and easy. Her performance of the triple role merits commendation. In the combat with Mohammed she gave evidence of much skill in the use of the sword, and greater physical endurance than her lithe form would indicate. Sidney C. France, who was especially engaged to support Mlle. Zoe, played Mohammed effectively, and enhanced the combat scene alluded to by his deft use of the sword. W. Marden acted Col. de Courcy in a natural, manly style; Charles Foster made an excellent Sergt. Dubourg; E. M. Saratoni created much fun as Ali Bey, and Mr. Martin gave due effect to the character of Achmet Bey, and the remaining comparatively unimportant characters received due attention from those to whom they were assigned. The drama was preceded by "A Loan of a Lover" and supplemented by "Tom Oringle," which programme was performed the first three evenings of the week. On Thursday and Friday, "The Flower of the Forest" was produced, with Mlle. Zoe in the title role, preceded by "A Regular Fix," acted under the title of "Marston in a Fix;" and on Saturday "The Broken Sword," with Mlle. Zoe as Myrtillo, and "Esmeralda," with Zoe in the title role, constituted the attractions. This evening, Sept. 30th, J. H. O'Neil, the Delmar sisters, little Delmar, and L. W. Harleigh, are to appear in a new drama entitled "Down by the Sea," mentioning it which must not be confounded with a sketch often performed in variety halls under nearly the same title.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 718 Broadway, has for sale C. W. Tayleure's dramatization of "Fay; or, The Old Ma'muselle's Secret," and the following artists can be engaged through his agency:—Ella Wren, for leading business; Laura Keene, for her costume recitals; Mr. and Mrs. Melbourne clogists, etc.; Augusta L. Dargon, legitimate star; Mdlle. Quelet and J. Lester, double trapeze performers, etc.; Mdlle. Cerito, premier danseuse, and Patty Rosa, character vocalist. He also has musicians who want engagements and advertises for variety performers.

CLARA DA HAVEN left this city on Sept. 28th, for Philadelphia, to arrange for the opening of James Robinson's Circus there, and he can be addressed as per advertisement.

ANTON RUBENSTEIN, the great Russian pianist, made his first bow to an American audience at Steinway Hall, on the night of September 23d, and was received by a crowded audience, composed mainly of the wealthy German people of the fashionable classes of the metropolis, the American portion being in the minority. In the second concert company which has been presented to the New York public this season, we have a troupe including two genuine stars of the musical hemisphere of Europe, viz:—Rubenstein and Wieniawski, the former one of the greatest of living pianists, and the latter one of the finest violinists of the day, in "One Wife" on the 23d, and during the balance of the week Julia in "The Hunchback." The revival of the legitimate drama did not, however, tend to increase the attendance, which was meagre during the week, neither was the performance up to the standard. Miss Thompson had a good conception of the character of Julia, which she was enabled to embody to a certain extent, her principal defect being lack of physical force to correctly interpret those passages which absolutely demand it. Portions of Mr. Neil Warner's Master Walter deserve commendation, but he marred several of his best scenes by a drawling intonation. The balance of the characters were very poorly acted. The theatre will remain closed until Oct. 14th, when the Aimee opera bouffe company will commence an engagement, and during the interregnum the auditorium is to be renovated and beautified.

WALLACK'S THEATRE is announced to be opened for the regular fall and winter season on Tuesday evening, Oct. 1st, with W. S. Gilbert's comedy entitled "Pygmalion and Galatea," originally produced with great success at the Haymarket Theatre, London, Eng. The cast, which includes George Bonfface, J. H. Stoddart, J. B. Polk, W. M. Holland, G. F. Browne, Miss Katherine Rogers, from London, Eng., who will make her metropolitan debut, Miss Edith Challis, Mrs. Foster and Mme. Ponisi. During the recess since Saturday last the auditorium is to be entirely re-decorated. Among the other members of the company engaged for the season are Mr. John Gilbert, Mr. Lytton (Sothern), Mr. Edwin, Mr. Leonard, Miss Effie Germon and Mrs. John Sefton. Mr. John Gilbert will continue the acting manager; James Schonberg, stage manager; J. S. Wright, prompter; Theodore Moss, treasurer; Thomas Baker, leader of orchestra; H. Isherwood and G. Evans, scenic artists; H. Goodwin, appointments, and H. Butler, machinist. Some new scientific light effects are to be introduced in the comedy by Prof. Tobin, of the Polytechnic institute of London, Eng., he having been engaged expressly for the occasion. Mr. Sothern will personally supervise the production of the comedy.

TENNIE C. CLAFLIN is about to make her debut upon the dramatic stage. She has selected for such event the character of Portia, in "The Merchant of Venice," which she has been studying for some time past.

WHITE'S "DIAMONDS" is the attraction at the Olympic Theatre with the performances of Saturday evening, Sept. 28th, and will remain the "star" for the week. This evening, Sept. 30th, Dominick Murray commences an engagement, when the sensational drama entitled "Escaped from Sing Sing" will be revived, and at the matinee performances the burlesque of "Chow Chow" will be given.

belle's impersonation of Desmarets was also exceedingly satisfactory. Miss Leclercq appeared during the week in "The Lady of Lyons," "The Hunchback," "A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing" and "The Love Chase," the two first named pieces being produced for her benefit on the 27th. Miss Leclercq was last week. This week and the last week of Miss Leclercq's engagement will be marked by the production for the first time in Philadelphia of a new drama entitled "Alice; or, a Sister's Penance." On the 7th of October, Mr. Joseph Proctor's sensational drama of "The Red Highwayman" will be produced for the first time at this theatre. Miss Blanche De Bar will soon make her appearance here.

THE CAPITOL THEATRE, Albany, N. Y., has done a very large business the past week, with Little Nell as the star, who appeared in a drama entitled "Fidelia, the Fire Waif," wrote our correspondent on Sept. 21st, adding that—"It was written by H. A. Weaver, of the Globe Theatre, Boston, Mass., especially for her, and received its first representation on any stage on Sept. 2nd. The play is a very good one of its class (sensational), and Nell seemed to have a good deal of talent for acting, and made a decided impression on the large audience who nightly assembled to witness it. Little Nell personates several characters, and has greatly improved since her last appearance here. Her singing, dancing and banjo playing are good, while her gestured and delivery are remarkably correct for one so young. Messrs. T. Melville as Dave Bird, 4 fireman, J. D. Murray as his colleague, Jake Woods, J. E. Nugent as Mark Markham, the returned Californian, Charles Waverley as Harry Warne, Mortimer as Jasper Winch, Miss Hannah Bailey as Zoe and Miss May Nugent as Aunt Peggy, gave excellent impersonations. Messrs. Scallan, Armstrong, Packard and Nelson, who filled out the balance of the cast, acted their parts in a satisfactory manner. Dan Bryant's 'From Pomp' will be the next attraction, commencing Sept. 30th.....Joseph H. Keane has been playing to light business at the Trimble Opera House during the week. Mr. Keane appeared as Rip Van Winkle, and is rather a clever actor. He came to us with the reputation of giving a close imitation of Mr. Jefferson in that character, and succeeded, in a mild manner, in doing so. The company supporting Mr. Keane is light. Miss Leo Hudson will appear at this house, commencing the 30th, under the management of Mr. Keane. W. T. Melville, the comedian of the Capitol Theatre, will join the company. He severs his connection with that house this evening (28th). His loss will be deeply felt by the patrons of that theatre, with whom he was so deservedly popular.....Mrs. Macready, supported by Milnes Levick and full dramatic company, will appear at Martin Hall on Sept. 30th and Oct. 1st."

C. W. COULDOCK commenced a six nights' engagement at the Academy of Music, Cleveland, O., on Sept. 23d, in "Richelieu," followed on the 24th with the "Chimney Corner" and "Willow Copse" on the 25th. Our correspondent, writing on Sept. 27th, reviews the performances as follows:—"The fielding of Mr. Couldock was very good, but his Richelieu was tame. Mr. Marcel Forsburg's Sir Richard Vaughn was quiet, natural and easy, and at the same time, correct. The part of Rose Fielding was well acted by Miss Effie E. Elsler, who was called before the curtain at the close of the second act. The Colonel Vanguard of J. R. Curran's was well rendered, as was also the Lady Apsley of Mrs. Isabella Phillips. The Lucy Vanguard of Miss Laura Don was a beautiful piece of acting. Mrs. Effie Elsler appeared as Meg, which she handled in a praiseworthy manner. The Dick Hulks of Geo. O. Morris was ably sustained. John Ogden as Bill Staggers, and W. H. Seymour as Augustus, were, at intervals, very funny, especially in their pugilistic scene in the first act. Mr. Louis F. Barrett played the part of Arthur Apsley creditably. 'Louis the Eleventh' was presented on the 26th, and 'King Henry the Fourth' on the 27th, for the benefit bill, with Mr. Couldock as Sir John Falstaff. 'The Willow Copse' will be repeated for the matinee, and 'The Lancashire Lass' will be the closing bill."

AT THE PROVIDENCE, R. I., OPERA HOUSE, "Jane Eyre" was played on Sept. 23d, 24th and 25th. Our correspondent, writing on the 28th, makes the following comments thereupon:—"Whiting's 'Rochester' was a fine conception, and Miss Cameron's 'Jane Eyre' was well rendered. The support was generally satisfactory. 'Richard III' was presented in an excellent manner on the 26th, Mr. Tilton's Richard and Mr. Whiting's Richmond deserving special mention. 'Camille' was played on the 27th, Miss Cameron portraying the heroine with remarkable power. 'Jane Eyre' was repeated at the matinee on the 28th, and 'Ten Nights in a Bar Room,' and 'Black-Eyed Susan,' were played in the evening. 'The Duke's Signal' will be brought out on Sept. 30th, with new costumes, properties and scenic effects, and will probably run during the entire week.....At Harrington's, 'Trumps' was played by Yankee Locke, with fair support, on the 24th. On the 26th, 27th and 28th, Maggie Mitchell and company represented 'Jane Eyre,' 'Fanchon' and 'Little Barefoot.' Maggie was received with much enthusiasm, but did not draw as large houses as usual, which was owing in some measure to the bad weather, but as much, probably, to the fact that her plays have been worn threadbare here. Mr. L. R. Shewell afforded able support, and the company generally was above the average, for which Mr. B. F. Lowell, the manager, deserves our thanks."

THE ARTISTS engaged for Martin and Bartholomew for their pantomime troupe are requested, through an advertisement, to assemble for rehearsal at White's Athenæum, this city, on Oct. 3d.

ARTHUR CAMBRIDGE, who was charged with absconding from Boston, Mass., with the receipts of M. W. Fiske's entertainment, and who sent us a letter of explanation which was published in our past issue, is contradicted in his statements by the following self-explanatory letter:—

EDITOR OF THE CLIPPER.—I wish to contradict the statement made by Mr. Cambridge in this (last) week's CLIPPER. It is totally false. He was not engaged upon salary, but was to receive a certain per cent. of the profits. He absconded Sept. 6th with the receipts of the night before. There was nothing due him. Respectfully yours, M. W. FISKE.
St. Louis, Sept. 21st, 1872.

FORD'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE, Baltimore, Md., was opened for the regular season on Sept. 23d, and a goodly sized audience was in attendance. Our correspondent, writing on Sept. 28th, gives the appended report:—"The officers of the house are John T. Ford, proprietor and manager; F. L. Keller, stage manager; Harry Ford, treasurer, and J. Rosewald, leader of orchestra. Besides the customary process of cleaning and general renovation, a decided improvement has been made by the erection of a partition between the back seats of the orchestra circle and the lobby, thus shutting out sounds from the exterior and adding to both comfort and appearance. The scenery and properties have also received large additions, thus presenting to the eye, fresh auditorium and stage, a feast decidedly pleasing to the eye. J. Sheridan Knowles' exquisite play of 'The Hunchback' was given for the opening night, Mrs. F. B. Chanfrau personating Julia. The lady was new to Baltimore, and during the first two acts opinions were kept in abeyance; but from the third act to the end of the play she exhibited a power, tempered by sweetness and pathos, that dissipated all doubts as to her ability, and raised her to an enviable rank in the boards of Ford. Mr. Frederick Robinson's impersonation of Master Walter was almost faultless, and re telling, that he divided the honors of the evening pretty equally with the star. Mr. J. Gosdin rendered Sir Thomas Clifford in a very creditable manner, and received a fair share of applause. Mr. H. Mitchel acquitted himself quite satisfactorily as Modus. Miss Jennie Parker, as Helen, was pleasing, the scene in which she pleads to Modus' diffidence and draws out his amorous propensities, being especially well acted. The balance of the support was generally good, being distributed as follows:—Pathson, Mr. Ford; Lord Tinsel, F. Fitzpatrick; Playlove, Fred. Hartwell, S. Parker; Thomas, H. Melville; Wilford, B. C. Smith, and Stephen, Mr. Shine. On Tuesday evening, 'Dora' was presented, Mrs. Chanfrau in the title rôle, and Mr. Robinson as Farmer Allen, again achieving golden opinions with their admirable acting. On Wednesday and Thursday 'Dora' was repeated; Friday, for Mrs. Chanfrau's benefit, were presented 'The Lady of Lyons' and 'A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing'; Saturday afternoon, 'Dora'; at night, 'Dora' and 'A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing.' The attendance throughout the week averaged quite satisfactorily. Mrs. Chanfrau will remain another week. She will be succeeded by Barlette Thompson, and then comes in regular order J. Lester Wallack, the Fifth Avenue Theatre Company, Lingard, Mr. and Mrs. Boucicault, Mad. Janauscheck, Mrs. Oates, the original 'Humpty Dumpty' Company, Carlotta Patti and Madame Rubenstein, Theodore Thomas, Aimee, Pauline Lucca, and others."

CONCERNING AMUSEMENTS IN ST. LOUIS, Mo., our correspondent, writing on Sept. 27th, says:—"At De Bar's, Edwin Adams opens on Sept. 30th, for one week, with 'Enoch Arden.'.....closes at the Grand Opera House on Sept. 23d, in 'across the Continent,' to a good house, which state of things has favored that gentleman since. This piece continued for three nights, when it was withdrawn in favor of 'Ben. McCullough.' This play will continue for the remainder of the week, and terminate Mr. Byron's engagement here. He goes under the present management, supported by the Olympic company, to Memphis, Tenn., for one week, the interim being filled at this theatre by Albert Aiken and his combination, with 'The Witches of New York.'.....At the Grand Opera House, 'Bad Dickey' has continued through the present week without meationable variance. It will be withdrawn after this week in favor of 'Ixion.' German opera is promised shortly."

AT THE OPERA HOUSE, Utica, N. Y., "Buffalo Bill" was played on Sept. 23d, 24th and 25th, with Jas. M. Ward as Bill, and Miss Winnetta Montague as Lillie Cody. Our correspondent, writing on Sept. 28th, states that:—"The representation was not successful, though the acting was uniformly good. On the 26th was produced 'The Lady of Lyons,' preceded by the farce of 'That Blessed Baby,' and on the 27th and 28th, 'The Winning Hand.' The piece was handsomely mounted, with new scenery and effects, by Messrs. McKinzey and Yates, and properties by Mr. J. Smith. On Monday, Sept. 30th, Miss Bertie Smith will receive a benefit, to be followed by Frank Mayo in 'Hamlet.' Mrs. Macready will appear on Oct. 4th and 5th, and during that engagement Manager Forrester will take his company to Oswego."

LANNIER'S DRAMATIC CONSTELLATION closed a six nights' engagement at Hudson, N. Y., Sept. 28th. Jennie Carroll is the stellar attraction, assisted by Mr. Harry R. Bell, Frank Montiord, M. R. Slevin, Thomas W. Bolas, Harry Buckley, W. C. Davis, John E. Lewis, Harry R. Stetson, H. F. Dunspaugh, Frank M. Culison, Jos. F. Edgar, W. C. Ermontrout, W. M. Lannier, Miss Bertie, Gilbert Gray, Fannie Lewis, Maggie Salisbury and Miss Viola Estelle. Ned Tinsham is the agent, and C. A. Potter the assistant agent.

FROM MANCHESTER, N. H., our correspondent forwards the following items of news:—W. Horace Lingard is billed for Oct. 1st; thence to Concord, N. H., 2d; Lawrence, Mass., 3d; Lynn, 4th; Worcester, 5th, and begins a week's engagement at Trimble Opera House, Albany, N. Y., Oct. 7th.....Agnes Wallace's Comic Opera and Comedy Company is booked for Music Hall, Oct. 23d, 24th and 25th; Sam. B. Vilia, manager, and Col. Rice, agent..... There is a good opening here for Christmas week, there being nothing booked. A pantomime company would draw well for that time.

MR. AND MRS. J. W. ALBAUGH commenced an engagement at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, on Sept. 23d, in "Poverty Flat," drawing good houses to the end of the week. The play is of the ultra sensational stripe, and as such delights the masses. Mr. Albaugh's acting of Tom Flynn, of Virginia, was manly and forcible, and tinged with a pleasing vein of humor. Mrs. Albaugh as Miriam, the Child of Poverty Flat, played with much feeling. Mr. Chas. F. Nicholls made his first appearance at this theatre as Tom Blackburn, the man who shot Sandy McGee, playing the part very strongly. Mr. Anderson personated Joe Mercer. Miss Nellie Jones enacted the rôle of Teresa admirably. The balance of the cast was filled in a generally commendable manner. One of the features of the representation was the scenery, which was put on with a completeness, realism and general effectiveness but seldom witnessed. The Albaughs closed on Sept. 28th, and on the 30th Lawrence Barrett opens in "Hamlet."

THE RICHMOND, VA., THEATRE re-opened for the fall and winter season Sept. 23d, with "Griffith Gaunt." Our correspondent, writing on Sept. 28th, says:—"A worse play could not have been selected for the opening to show off a company. The acting, though, was good throughout, particularly that of the principal characters, by Mrs. E. A. Eberle, Mrs. H. J. Parker, the Misses Nellie Johnson, Effie Warren, and Messrs. J. T. Fannin, E. A. Eberle and J. A. Hodges. The greetings to Mr. and Mrs. Eberle were most cordial and enthusiastic. Some changes in the interior of the building have been made, and several new scenes added. The settings of the stage showed much taste. The drama was repeated on the 26th. 'Ours' was produced on the 26th and 26th, in which the company appeared to greater advantage. On the 27th 'East Lynne' was well rendered. The company, so far, appears to be the best we have had for some years, but a decided opinion of the merits of each member would be rather hasty upon so short an acquaintance. There was a full house the first night and a fair attendance during the week, notwithstanding some bad weather. 'The Ticket-of-Leave Man' is announced for to-night, and 'Ours' for the Saturday matinee. Miss Jean Hosmer will commence a week's engagement on Sept. 30th, opening in 'Elizabeth.'

"DIVORCE" completed its second week on Sept. 28th, at the Royal Lyceum, Toronto, Ont., and attracted crowded houses nightly. It will probably retain the boards for another week, after which "The Romance of a Poor Young Man" will be produced, with everything new.

MISS BLANCHES DE BAR was the recipient of a benefit, tendered her by the Shakespeare Club, an amateur organization, at the Varieties Theatre, New Orleans, La., on Sept. 25th, when "Piot and Passion" and "A Comical Countess" were performed. The theatre was crowded in every part. At the close of the drama Miss De Bar was presented by Judge Branghn, on behalf of the club, with an elegant gold medal and chain, inclosed in a neat velvet case.

JOE MURPHY is to commence a week's engagement at Leavenworth, Kansas, Sept. 30th.

AT THE CINCINNATI, O., THEATRES the following changes have occurred since our last reports:—At Pike's Opera House, Robert McWade closed his engagement on Sept. 27th. No performance was given on the 28th. M'lle. Moriaccbi, supported by Tom Hampton and company, is billed for Sept. 30th.....At Wood's, in the carnival scene of "The Black Crook," Willie Gaylord, contortionist, appeared, and also acted Dragonfin. Professor Eugene Doeblin and lady, magicians, also appeared. The orchestra was withdrawn after the 28th. On the 30th Mrs. James A. Oates and her company appear.....At Mozart Hall "The Color Guard" was acted by amateurs during the week.....The National, which closed on Sept. 21st, was re-opened Sept. 23th by the Ventini Pantomime Company in "Humpty Dumpty."

C. W. KIDDEN AND MONS. VENTINI are organizing a pantomime company with which they will open in Xenia, O., on Oct. 21, playing in Dayton the next three nights, and going thence to Mansfield, Sandusky, Toledo, Detroit and Milwaukee. The company, so far as engaged, will be Andy Morris, Ed. Murray, Mons. Ventini, the Gregorie Brothers, Phil. Gibbons, Dick Johnson, McLaughlin, M'lle Zuleita and Lizzie Star; G. R. Kirby, leader of orchestra, and J. W. Heidler, advance agent.

Musical.

A CLARIONET PLAYER, who can play string, tenor or baritone, is wanted by Ill Henri, who can be addressed as per advertisement.

GEO. A. FLORANCE, leader of orchestra, and Mrs. Florance, soubrette, vocalist and pianist, can be addressed as per card elsewhere.

CHAS. LEE advertises for a violinist, B flat cornet player and a violoncellist.

TEMPLETON'S ENGLISH OPERA TROUPE performed at Chattanooga, Tenn., three nights, commencing Sept. 23d.

A VIOLINIST and a B flat cornet player, who are well up in dramatic and variety business, advertise that they can be engaged.

AT MAGUIRE'S OPERA HOUSE, San Francisco, Cal., the Fabbri Opera Combination have given but one opera—"Ernani," on Sept. 17th—since my last communication, says our correspondent, writing on the 21st, adding that "'Ernani' was given before a crowded audience, but it proved too heavy for the company, which is without a basso, and the opera being sung in German added to the leaden character of the performances. The selection of 'La Traviata' for this evening is a discreet choice, as it will no doubt prove to be within the powers of the company. 'Norma' is to be produced on the 25th.....Miss Minnie Walton's concert transpired at Pacific Hall on the 19th, when a brilliant crowd of musicians and singers were heard to advantage in their several specialties. The volunteers included all the California Theatre orchestra; Mrs. Bradford and Miss Wadsworth, sopranos; Vernon Lincoln and John C. Williams, tenors; Fred. Lyster, baritone; and the eminent artists, Louis Schmidt and Oscar Weil, violin; and Adolph Hartdegen, violincello. Miss Walton sang the pretty Spanish song 'Maria Dolores,' also her husband's (Frederick Lyster) last composition, 'The Bell's that rang Nellie a Bride,' both winning encores.....Platt's Hall was crowded in every part on the 20th, when the Handel and Haydn Society rendered the oratorio of 'The Creation.' The soloists were Gabriel, Mr. Marriner; Raphael, Mr. W. Campbell; Uriel, Mrs. Samuel D. Mayer; Adam, Mr. C. Makin; and Eve, Mrs. Marriner. The orchestra was large, and the society furnished a chorus of one hundred and fifty voices. The performance was even and pleasing. 'Elijah' is promised at an early day.....It seems that Mlle. Anna Sonntag will not make her debut as the Metropolitan Theatre in 'Norma' but in 'Il Trovatore' on Sept. 30th, with the following cast:—Leonora, Mlle. Anna Sonntag; Azucena, Signora Bianchi; Ines, Mme. Evans; Manrico, Signor Pietro Bacci; Count de Luna, Signor Sylves Rossi (first appearance in America); Ferrando, Signor Fulvia Rigo (first appearance in America); Ruiz, Mons. Charles; Gepsy, Mons. Roncovieri. Signor Muzio is manager; Mr. Fred. Lyster, business manager, and Nicolo Ravera and George T. Evans, conductors. 'William Tell,' 'La Juive' and 'Moses in Egypt' are announced as in rehearsal."

THEODORE THOMAS' ORCHESTRA performed at Wieting Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 27th, to a very large audience.

T. ROSENSTEIN, whose card find elsewhere, is prepared to furnish new string band music.

J. NICHOLAS GOODALL, violinist and pianist, advertises that he can be engaged.

"THAT COMICAL" BROWN, with his agent, Sam Sampson and A. H. Buxton, who had been passing a short season at Lake Umbagog, Me., commenced their season at Weid, Me., Sept. 23th; thence to Phillips, 26th; Farmington, 27th; Lisbon Falls, 28th, and appear at South Newmarket, N. H., 30th; Kingston, Oct. 1st; Plaiston, 2d, and South Boston, Mass., 3d.

THE FIRST concert of the season in Music Hall, Boston, occurred on Saturday night, Sept. 28th, when MAX STRAKOSCH introduced to the Boston public the old time favorite, Signor Mario. There was not a large audience present, but what they lacked in numbers was amply made up in enthusiasm, for everything pored or was encored without discrimination. Their performances, in this city, have already been noticed. The great event of the evening was the first appearance of Mario. He was kept bowing over and over for several minutes, so warm was his reception. His first number was the duet Si la Stanchezza, from "Trovatore," in which he was assisted by Miss Annie Louise Cary. This duet is one of the gems of "Trovatore," and always goes well, no matter who sings it, but in this instance it was really sad to listen to it. Miss Cary did her part superbly, but Mario wavered—his voice failed him fearfully; but with all his failure, there is the stamp of the true artist present in everything he does, and he only needs to come to be met with the thought, "What must he have been in his prime!" He sang, besides, M'appari from "Martha," but there was but the ghost of his voice, and it was really painful to hear him.

THE OPENING CONCERT in Tremont Temple, Boston, on Tuesday, Sept. 24th, by the Mendelssohn Quintette Club, went off nicely. Edilia Otell, who has been abroad, made her first appearance in several years, and showed marked improvement since last here. The Boston favorite, M. W. Whitney, who has lately made quite a brilliant success in England, also appeared, and seemed to have lost none of his former brilliancy and power during his absence.

THE HOLMAN OPERA TROUPE commenced their season at Hamilton, Ont., on Sept. 23d, in the "Enchantress," and later in the week they appeared in the "Grande Duchess" and "Satanella." They go from there to London for three nights, commencing Sept. 30th.

Variety Halls.

DAN SHELBY advertises for a wardrobe keeper, who can act, for Barton's Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y.

CHARLES E. DOBSON, who recently started on a tour with a variety company from Chicago, Ill., has returned there on account of bad business, and has been engaged as stage manager of the Halstead Street Opera House.

LOUIE IRVING, professionally known as "The Mocking Bird Vocalist," having been seriously ill with lung fever for some time past, he is compelled to cancel her future professional engagements for some weeks.

THE PALMER SISTERS—Jennie and Antonia—vocalists, and Charles Adams, Dutch comedian, it is rumored, are organizing a company to go to California next Spring.

THE RENTFROW TROUPE OF SENSATIONAL STARS performed at Hamburg, Iowa, Sept 26th, 26th, 27th and 28th; and are billed for Atchison, Kansas, 30th, Oct. 1st, 2d and 3d, and Topeka, 4th, 5th, 7th and 8th.

TALENT is wanted for the Globe Theatre, Troy, N. Y., which will be opened on Oct. 2d by Goss & Galligan, with Ned Fox as stage manager. See card elsewhere.

VARIETY ARTISTS are wanted for the Pacific Garden, Cincinnati, O. Address as per advertisement.

A SONG AND DANCE LADY is wanted by Martini Chiriski, who would also like to hear from Blanche Stanley. See advertisement.

JOHNNY MAYWOOD, who can be addressed care of this office, wants a lady partner for specialty business.

HAWLEY, gymnast, at present performing at the Oxford, London, Eng., is favorably noticed by The Era of Sept. 1st, as will be seen by an extract in another column. He will return here at the expiration of his engagement.

R. M. CARROLL and his three boys are amusing the Chicagoans at the Globe Theatre, with their musical and other specialities, where they can be addressed.

AT THE VARIETIES, Pittsburgh, Pa., among the new people last week were Agnes Sutherland, Alice Bateman, and Billy Noonan. Miss Sutherland's songs were deservedly received with favor, and Alice Bateman and Billy Noonan did their double clog dancing with accuracy and vigor—their time being particularly noticeable for precision. One of the most conspicuous features on the bill was a female minstrel first part. The ladies were clad in long flowing dresses, entirely free from distinctive ornamentation, writes our correspondent, adding that "Billy Barry, bones, and Dick Gorman, tambo, were on the ends in black faces, while Billy Noonan and Harry Leslie occupied positions by the sides of the end men in white faces, and H. W. Williams and Jas. Maas were interlocutors. The ladies, six in number, sang creditably, while Billy Barry and Dick Gorman did their parts well as end men. Barry is a versatile performer of decided ability. The 'Perilous Trapeze Act,' by Mons. Dickini Gormani (Dick Gorman), was very comical. Guasie Crayton and Jas. Maas, in the interlude of 'Schneider, How You Vas?' acquitted themselves with credit. An Ethiopian plantation sketch, by Billy Barry and Jas. Maas, was also one of the enjoyable acts. The entertainments concluded with the serio-comic drama, 'Life of Fifth Avenue; or, The Newsboys' Supper,' in which H. W. Williams and Miss Lucy Clifton personated the leading characters. Attendance very fair."

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, Brooklyn, advertises to admit ladies—accompanied by gentlemen—free, on Friday nights. The feature of the performance has been the Solar pantomime troupe, which includes Miss Solar Brandt. The protean actress, Miss Nellie, joins the Olympic band this week.

HASSAN AND SELIM, Egyptian jugglers and gymnasts; the Misses Lillie Hall and Iona Lang, vocalists, and Welch and Rice's Carnival Minstrels were the new attractions at Fred. Aims' American Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., the past week. The Egyptians may be classed among the best in their line, both as jugglers and gymnasts. Miss Hall and Miss Lang dress tastefully, are passably good looking, and sang well. Welch and Rice's male and female minstrels gave an excellent first part. Fayette Welch, tamborine, and Billy Rice, bones, were on the ends, and Geo. L. Hall attended to the middle business. There were twelve ladies in the minstrel scene, seated on two rows of chairs, the rear line being considerably elevated above the advance. They were elegantly and bewitchingly costumed. Eight male artists appeared in the first part, in drawing room attire. Welch and Rice were live, funny end men, but they consumed too much time in talking. A female torchlight procession, each lady wearing a cap and cape, and bearing a blazing torch, was introduced, and a national chorus and allegorical tableau concluded this portion of the bill, amid hearty applause. It was one of the most novel, and at the same time most enjoyable first parts ever seen there. The olio performances were excellent.

AT THE RICHMOND, VA., Academy of Music, the attendance continued about the same. The company is composed of the Misses Annie Clare, Macy Rodiecap, Annie Western, and Messrs. Joe Mack, Ben Hayes, Frank Gayton and Harry Murdic. Cincinnatus, song and dance man, was the only new addition this past week, and a better one could not have been made. Miss Claudia Walters was announced for Sept. 26th, but had not put in an appearance.

TALENT is wanted by Joe Elliot, who advertises.

AT THE GARDEN MUSIC HALL, Third street, above Girard avenue, Philadelphia, the principal features were Billy Wright in Ethiopian delineations, Miss Mollie Wilson in sentimental vocalism, M'lle Salina in songs and dances, and Master Charles Carter, excellent Dutch comedian and dancer. Business continues very good at this establishment, which presents a much improved appearance since the recent alterations.

THE ATTENDANCE AT MORRISSEY'S VARIETIES, Philadelphia, affords unmistakable proof of the attractive nature of the entertainment there given. The new appearances during the week ending Sept. 28th were Miss Bianca Stanley, Charley Reynolds and Thomas H. Jefferson. Miss Blanche Stanley displayed to much advantage her abilities as a serio-comic vocalist, and Thomas H. Jefferson promises to become a great favorite, his banjo solos being encored several times. Charley Reynolds met with a very cordial reception on making his re-appearance in "Off to Richmond" and "The Two Dromios." The songs and dances of Quilter and Goldrick, a very clever team, not set by J. P. Hill, and the dancing of Fred. and Emilie Siegel were the other most prominent features of the programme. Hughey Haggerty, Dutch comedian, and J. F. Hill, gymnast, closed on the 28th of September. This week, Misses Lotta Savoy and Julia Bennett, danseuses, will be added to the company, and the Female Minstrels will make their first appearance since the season opened. The specialties engaged are more than usually fine. Their acts, being original and new, are seen with two or three encores nightly. John T. Kelley, Irish comedian, is good in his specialties. Master Barney was very heavily billed and on his appearance was well received. Johnny Reese is very comical and keeps the house in a roar of laughter while on the stage. Lena Clark closed on the 28th, going to Cleveland. The Lillian Sisters were not on, although originally engaged. No new people announced for Sept. 30th.

THE NEW FACES at the Baltimore, Md., Opera House, on Sept. 23d, were Miss Annie Harrison, danseuse; Miss Louise Davis, danseuse and actress; George S. Knight, Dutch comedian, who made a big hit; and the Collyer boys, Dan and Eddie, who execute very creditable clogs and double songs and dances. Lulu Delmy closed Sept. 28th, likewise W. J. Thompson and Belle Graham, who open at the Washington, D. C., Theatre Comique on the 30th; also Aline Le Favre and John Manning, who go to Mortimer's Varieties, Philadelphia. Harry Brown, Sam Sanford, Viola Clifton, Lizzie Barrett and Geo. Herman, open on the 30th. Business has been fine.....At the Odeon Varieties the attendance has been good, in spite of the non-appearance of new people. No departures or arrivals are announced at present. Dan Howard, the stage manager, takes a benefit on October 11th..... The Front has been drawing large houses the past week, the following host of novelties being offered:—Miss Lizzie Kelsey, vocalist; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Young, duologue artists; Miss Jennie Wilmore, burlesque actress and vocalist; the Watson Brothers, acrobats and gymnasts; Miss Lydia Webster, Indian club swinger; Geo. White, Ethiopian song and dance performer, and Geo. F. Moore and Kitty Henderson, who do Dutch acts together, the latter also performing a neat clog dance. All these people were favorably received. Bobby Newcomb continues to be a great attraction. Harry Lester and Miss Mary Blake will open here on Sept. 30th.

AT THE COLISEUM, Rochester, N. Y., Miss Mary Kenny commenced an engagement on Sept. 23d with her tumbleronicon act, producing sweet music from common glasses, her performance being really fine.

AT CINCINNATI, O., Kate Hunter was the only fresh appearance at the Race Street Varieties, opening on Sept. 30th. Mr. Shannon closed on the 28th, and went to Bunnell's Museum, Pittsburgh, Pa.....At the Olympic James Kelly, comedian, commenced, and Nellie Seymour closed, going to Cleveland.....At the Pacific Frank Lum, Eddie Trainer and Charles Gregory closed, and the Ashton brothers, gymnasts, and John Long, balancer, commenced.....The Sycamore Street Varieties re-opened on Sept. 23d. Billy Diamond, Johnny Connors, Emma Barrett and the Wallace sister, are the chief features.

JIMMY WELCH, Irish and Dutch comedian and vocalist, who can be addressed care of this office, wants engagements.

Negro Minstrelsy.

BILLY STEWART'S MINSTRELS, which have been performing under canvas during the summer, are re-organising at Port Wayne, Ind., and will start out for the winter season, traveling by rail, about Oct. 10th.

BUCKLEY AND SHARPLEY'S MINSTRELS are billed to perform at Manchester, N. H., Oct. 3d; Concord, 4th; Portsmouth 5th, and Portland, Me., 7th.

HARRY ROBINSON'S MINSTRELS are to appear at East Saginaw, Mich., on Oct. 14th.

AT HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE, Brooklyn, the clog dancers Thomas and Henry, together with J. C. Campbell, Bernardo, Archie Hughes and Bob Smith, appeared in an attractive minstrel bill to good houses since our last. On the 30th of September McKee and Rodgers join the troupe.

SIMMONS & SLOCUM'S MINSTRELS, Philadelphia, offer an attractive programme this week, including John F. Poole's Ethiopian burlesque of "John Sheppard and Joseph Blueskin," which has been for some weeks in rehearsal, and will be produced for the first time on the evening of Sept. 30th.

A DISSOLUTION of partnership on the 24th of Sept. in the proprietorship of Moran and Dixey's Minstrel Troupe, Philadelphia, has left Frank Moran as the sole proprietor, and the troupe will henceforth be known as Frank Moran's Minstrels, E. F. Dixey retiring, it is said, to private life. Chas. Gibbons closed here on the 28th of Sept. This week there will be an entire change of programme, both first and second parts, introducing J. H. Budworth, who will take the end in the first part, Frank Moran being on the other end. The sketches of "David Darrick" and "Black Diamonds" and J. H. Budworth's "Happy Moments" will be the principal novelties. Business was fair during the week ending Sept. 28th.

AT THE ALHAMBRA THEATRE, San Francisco, Cal., the oft told tale of large audiences drawn to see Maguire's California Minstrels has to be repeated in regard to the business of the week ending the 21st. In its opening scene the selections were "Little May," by Benj. Harris; "Hi Cum Go," by Chas. Sutton; "I'm Waiting," by W. F. Baker; "If Ever I Cease to Love," by Bob Hart; "The Day When You'll Forget Me," by J. G. Russell; with Bob Hart's new Anale, "The Arizona Diamonds." The olio was entirely new, comprising "Eckert's Swiss Echo Song," agreeably rendered by Mme. Simonsen; sketch, "The Colored Troops Fought Nobly," characters by McAndrews, Hart, Ryman and Rousson; Marten Simonsen's violin fantasie on "Annie Laurie," greatly applauded; Delehanty and Hengler's new song and dance, "She's My Sugar Plum;" the sketch, "The Three O'Clock Train," by Bob Hart, Chas. Sutton and Manley Scott; the whole concluding with "Nip and Tuck," by the company. The vocal force of the company being strong, it has been determined to bring out English opera, and next week "The Bohemian Girl," in a condensed form, will be produced, with Baker as Thaddeus, Russell as the Count, and Mme Simonsen as Arline—wrote our correspondent on Sept. 21st.

W. HENRY RICE has taken a lease of Thoma' Music Hall, on Central avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets, Cincinnati, O., and is now converting it into a minstrel hall, which he will open for the fall and winter season with a first-class company, on Oct. 14th. Performers desiring engagements are referred to Mr. Rice's card elsewhere.

MAGGIE PRENDERGAST, a daughter of the late T. B. Prendergast, and the adopted daughter of James and Fanny Hyland, died at Brownville, N. Y., Sept. 11th, at the age of fifteen years and four months. Her remains were interred at Constableville. We believe that Dan Bryant was her god-father.

THE GEORGIA MINSTRELS performed at De Bar's Opera House, St. Louis, Mo., during the past week, to fair business.

BUCKLEY & SHARPLEY'S MINSTRELS gave a fine entertainment to a large audience at Harrington's Opera House, Providence R. I., on Sept. 23d.

THE MOST IMPORTANT EVENT which has transpired in Chicago ill., amusement circles for the past week was the inauguration of Myers' New Opera House, on Sept. 23d. Of the house our correspondent gives the following particulars:—

The theatre is situated on Monroe street, between State and Dearborn, is four stories in height, with a spacious entrance fourteen feet in width, twenty feet in length, to the front of the house. The entrance is ornamented with bright colors in perspective, the floor rising by a flight of steps to the level of the rear row of seats in the auditorium, and the ticket office is at the foot of these. The gallery is reached by a flight of stairs just outside the door leading to the auditorium. Immediately in front of the entrance is the stage, which is 35x27 feet, with a height of 31 feet. The auditorium is 82x80, with a parquet, parquet circle, dress circle, family circle and gallery, the last two being in the same tier. Upon each side of the stage are two proscenium boxes, adorned with handsome Corinthian columns and pilasters. The seats are comfortable and of the best quality. The lighting is light and airy and shows off to excellent taste. The drop curtain and scenery are painted by Messrs. R. H. Halley and Malmshea, the former being a marvel of beauty, representing a landscape concealed at the top and sides by falling crimson drapery lined with white satin. Taken as a whole, the theatre is one of the handsomest in the country and reflects considerable credit upon Messrs. Myers and Sam Hague.

The opening was a gala night, the house was crowded and the performances passed off in splendid style. The old favorites, Wm. Arlington and Ben Cotton, occupied the ends in the first part. J. R. Kemble officiated as interlocutor, J. H. Surridge, E. M. Kane, J. A. Lang, J. R. Kemble and F. Campbell comprised the quintet, whilst C. A. Hanneman led the orchestra. In the olio, C. Fostelle first appeared in a banjo solo, followed in a Negro motion in his Woman's Suffrage speech, Chas. Benedict in burlesque songs, F. Campbell in a select ballad; Kemble Cotton, Arlington, Kane and Surridge in a sketch entitled "Creatures of Impulse," the whole concluding with a comic sketch called "The Watch Dog," with Kemble, Surridge, Cotton, Arlington and Kane as actors. All the old favorites were warmly received and the new faces came in for a fair share of applause. Business has thus far been extremely good. An entire new programme will be presented every week. At the close of the first night's performance Mr. Myers was called before the curtain, made a neat speech, and was also presented with a gold-headed cane.

G. SWAINE BUCKLEY AND SAM SHARPLEY'S COMBINATION AND MINSTREL COMPANY are billed—Leominster, Mass., Oct. 1st; Nashua, N. H., 2d; Manchester, 3d; Concord, 4th; Portsmouth, 5th, and thence through the State of Maine. Miss Eva Brent and Harry Bryant are with the company, and John W. Sayles is agent.

COOL BURGESS is organizing a combination troupe in Canada, in which the well-known song and dance artists, Delehanty and Hengler, will be partizans; they join him in three weeks, and start on a trip through the Eastern States as the Burgess, Delehanty and Hengler Combination Troupe.

LAVELL'S FEMALE MINSTRELS, under the proprietorship of V. Hollar, are to perform a brief season at Union, Pa., commencing Sept. 30th; thence to Meadville, Erie, and into Canada for the winter. The company is as follows:—Miss Caddie Wright, actress, vocalist and dancer; Mlle. Henrietta, vocalist and jig dancer; Annie West, serio comic; Mlle. Laura; Lew Spencer, Dutch comedian; John M. Clarke, Ethiopian comedian; Gallagher and Martin, song and dance; John D. Angelis, Irish comedian; George Wray, banjoist, and Prof. George Olney, violinist and leader of orchestra.

DETTREE AND BENNESSY'S MINSTRELS performed at Hartford, Conn., Sept. 27th.

A BONE PLAYER, song and dance man, ballad singer and a first violinist are wanted by E. Poole, who advertises.

TO MANAGERS AND TRAVELING AGENTS. THE BEST THEATRE.

COLUMBUS, O., 13th SEPT., 1872.
PROPRIETOR OF NEW ATHENÆUM,
DEAR SIR:—In closing our engagement at your magnificent Theatre, permit me, on behalf of the Wallace Sisters, Jennie, Minnie and Maud, to return to you their sincere and heartfelt thanks for the great courtesy and consideration they have received at your hands, as represented by your able and hard working Treasurer—Mr. Phil. Sager. I take this greatest pleasure in recommending the New Athenæum as being infinitely the best Theatre, both as regards location and accessories in the city of Columbus, having given both houses a fair and impartial trial. Further, I would cordially and earnestly recommend the New Athenæum to all parties who wish to be treated honorably and squarely, and who wish to secure a series of large houses. Our business here I consider immense, and beyond my highest anticipations; a fact which is greatly owing to your able Treasurer. Allow me to thank you again, and to remain your sincere friend and supporter.
FRANK P. DOBSON,
Manager Wallace Sisters.

As Business Manager of the Wallace Sisters I have played in almost every Opera House in the country, and I find none with greater general facilities than the New Athenæum, Columbus.
GEO. J. SYDNEY,
Business Manager Wallace Sisters.

The great attention and valuable assistance I have received from Mr. Phil Sager, while billing the Wallace Sisters in Columbus, require my sincerest thanks, and I have pleasure in recommending Mr. Sager to all agents visiting Columbus.
